Abyssinia's New Plea to League Called Futile by Rome.

Special Session Of Council Seen

Duce Summons Army Leaders, Calls for More Troops.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

Italy charges Abyssinia with two hostile incidents as Mussolini calls 120 of his generals into council at Rome.

Two trainloads of American, British and Italian refugees arrived at Djibiuti, French Somaliland, from Addis Ababa, yesterday. Their governments had advised them their safety could not be guaranteed.

Special session of the League of Nations Council held likely within three weeks as Abyssinia makes last desperate appeal for intervention. Italian spokesman calls Ethiopia's appeal futile.

Great Britain now fears her efforts to avert war between Italy and Abyssinia will fail. Anthony Eden is criticized in House of Commons for his efforts along this line.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 10.—Italy charged Ethiopia with two new hostile incidents in their bitter dispute tonight shortly after Benito Mussolini called into council 120 generals and other high officers of his army.

An official communique said Ethiopians were guilty of anti-Italian offenses July 5 at Harrar, Ethiopia. A protest has been sent to Addis Ababa.

Official spokesmen hastened to assure questioners that the new incidents, although "demonstrative of the increasing intolerable Ethiopian influence," would not necessarily furnish the spark to set off a war.

Appeal Held Useless.

A government spokesman called Ethiopia's appeal to the League of Nations today for intervention another "useless attempt" to prolong league influence into the controversy.

The Harrar incidents involved the Italian Consul at Harrar, who was "insulted and menaced," the communique said, and an attack upon an Eritrean soldier attached to the Italian consulate. The communique asserted he was clubbed and stoned by 20 Ethiopians.

While the consul was on the way to the town of Dare-Deue, continued the communique, his automobile was halted by a group of Ethiopian soldiers under the command of an officer.

"With injurious words and attitude," it said, the Ethiopian officer tried to halt the car.

Stoned and Clubbed.

On the afternoon of the same day, Italy announced, the Eritrean soldier, while going to the postoffice from the consulate, was "surrounded and wounded by clubs and stones by about 20 natives, among whom there were even some municipal police and soldiers in uniform.

"The royal consul at Addis Ababa has already made the necessary formal protest to the Ethiopian government covering the two incidents."

The government spokesman declined to comment on the Emperor's appeal for neutrality to let Ethiopia get needed arms and munitions, asserting this appeal seemed more picturesque than significant, inasmuch as Ethiopia had been importing arms right along.

No information concerning the high military council was given out except that it was lengthy and "enthusiastic."

Earlier the newspaper Giornale d'Italia, usually authoritative and often officially inspired, accused Ethiopia of deliberately seeking the breakdown of conciliation efforts "in an effort to gain time * * * for her warlike preparations."

This latest broadside in the press battle against the African empire was fired as the number of troops destined for east African service rose to 120,000 with authoritative

ARCHDUKE OTTO,

U. S. Citizens Leave African Trouble Zone

100 Americans Included in Refugees Fleeing Addis Ababa.

By the United Press.

Djibiuti, French Somaliland, July 10.—Two special trains, carrying American, British and Italian refugees, arrived at Addis Ababa this afternoon.

They quit Abyssinia's capital after their governments advised them their security could not be guaranteed in event of war.

One hundred United States citizens, business men, missionaries, scientists and teachers were among the refugees.

Remaining at Addis Ababa are all the employes of the United States consulate general under Charge d'Affaires William Perry George. He has been transferred to Malta, but remains at Addis Ababa pending arrival of his successor, Cornelius H. van Engert, former United States consul general at Cairo.

Hold Whites in Contempt.

The United States State Department advised evacuation of Americans after George said Abyssinians hold whites in contempt, and they would be in grave danger if Italy makes war.

The refugees' arrival crowded Djibouti, normally a city of 8,000 with 400 Europeans, half of them French. Already 2,000 refugees have arrived, causing French authorities to increase the military police.

There is plenty of food in Djibouti, since it is a refueling and supply base for Red Sea and Gulf of Aden shipping.

Diet Revokes Austrian Ban On Hapsburgs

Signature of President Who Ousted Them in 1919 Needed.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, July 10.—Austria today again became the home of the Hapsburgs as the Federal Diet unanimously passed the cabinet's law revoking the royal family's banishment and restoring its vast confiscated properties.

Only the signature of President Wilhelm Miklas—who, ironically enough, served in the Renner cabinet of 1919, which pushed through the banishment and confiscation laws depriving the family of its home and heritage—was needed to bring the legislation into effect.

Several members of the Diet who joined in today's unanimous favorable vote also voted in 1919 to exile the deposed rulers and expropriate their properties.

One legislator who stubbornly refused to cast his ballot against the legislators 16 years ago had no vote today. He now is a member of the staff of a provincial newspaper.

Austria's legislative gesture of "repentance" was staged quietly. Parliament was half empty. There was no crowd of spectators either in the galleries or outside the building.

In the loge formerly reserved for members of the imperial family sat Duke Max von Hohenberg, son of Archduke Franz Ferdinand, whose assassination at Sarajevo in 1914 touched off the World War, and Baron Friedrich von Wiesener, Vienna representative of Archduke Otto, Hapsburg pretender to the throne.

Court Power To Invalidate Laws Denied

Rep. Sisson Says Highest Bench Acts Without Authority.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 10.—Denial that the Supreme Court possessed any authority, expressed or implied, to declare unconstitutional congressional acts today was projected at the University of Virginia's Institute of Public Affairs as the New Deal's reply to recent decisions of the high tribunal.

This answer came from Representative Fred J. Sisson (Democrat), of New York, serving as the Roosevelt Administration's spokesman at the "Constitution and New Deal" round table, which has stirred up more interest than and as much controversy as any topic ever discussed here.

Sisson not only argued that the Supreme Court had usurped the power to strike down congressional legislation but he held that the assumption of such authority was unnecessary, "positively harmful and its continued assumption and exercise in these times constitutes a danger to our form of Government and our economic system, such as may at any time cause them to break down."

"Streiched Thin."

The New Yorker's contentions did not arouse as much hostility as might be expected, although they did not go wholly unchallenged. From the floor speakers pointed out that the Supreme Court stood as the protector of the minority against ill-considered or hasty action by the executive and legislative branches of the Federal Government.

But Sisson retorted that the Supreme Court did not invalidate Congressional acts because they were hastily passed but, in general, on the ground that they were violative of the "due process clause," which he held had been "stretched extremely thin."

Perhaps one reason why the Sisson contentions did not arouse more heated controversy was that tomorrow had been scheduled as the day for discussion of the legal aspects of the New Deal. The session today had been set aside for a discussion of New Deal monetary measures and Prof. Walter E. Spahr, professor of economics at New York University, the other speaker, raked the Roosevelt Administration fore and aft on that score.

Prof. Spahr contended the White House has given a genial reception to the money-tinkers, brought out by the depression "just as gophers are brought out of their holes by a flood," with the result that there has been "an orgy of wild and fantastic monetary legislation which has been the laughing stock of the leading monetary authorities of the world."

Rakes Liberty Leaguer.

The Spahr address subsequently provoked attacks from the floor, while Sisson briefly defended the Administration, asserting the New York economist talked exactly as the bankers did when the Federal Reserve act was being framed in 1913. Spahr received a round of applause, however, when he replied that the point was not well taken because he was talking now exactly like Senator Carter Glass and the latter drafted the Federal Reserve act.

But the Spahr and Sisson discussions did not cross, due to a misun-

Ickes Called An Intruder By Tydings

Senator Sends Hot Reply to Secretary's Letter on Island's Inquiry.

Sees 'Cheap Publicity' in Charge of 'Whitewash' of Judge Wilson.

Telling Secretary Ickes that he was "intruding your unwelcome person into purely legislative matters," Senator Tydings (Democrat), last night wrote a stinging reply to a letter from the Secretary of the Interior criticizing conduct of the Virgin Islands inquiry being conducted by a committee of which Tydings is chairman.

Ickes had written the Senator charging that he had "whitewashed" Judge T. Webber Wilson, Federal judge of the islands, whose removal Ickes is seeking and who was a witness before the committee. Ickes also intimated that witnesses had committed perjury and complained because the Interior Department had not been permitted to cross-examine witnesses.

The inquiry, which started last week with a fist fight, was rapidly assuming the proportions of a major political battle. Gov. Paul Pearson, whom Ickes is defending, and who is under fire in the inquiry, is a Republican. Wilson is a Democrat and an appointee of Attorney General Cummings.

Charges "Cheap Publicity."

Accusing Ickes of indulging in "cheap publicity," Tydings said in his letter:

"It would have been far better, Mr. Secretary, if you would retract your own libel of Judge Wilson and put your own house in order before intruding your unwelcome person into purely legislative matters."

Tydings denied that Ickes had any right to demand that he be permitted to cross-examine witnesses. He labeled as "gross deceit" an Interior Department press release saying that Paul Yates, former assistant to Gov. Pearson, had been discharged "when you and I know that Mr. Yates had resigned five days before your press release was issued."

"And yet you have the effrontery to tell me in the legislative branch how to conduct a fair hearing when you don't even know the definition of the word 'fairness' by your own action."

He charged that the Interior Department had indulged in "cheap publicity" to "mislead the people as to the real conditions in the Virgin Islands and your department."

Intimidation Denied.

In complaining that Tydings had "whitewashed" Judge Wilson, Ickes charged that the Senator had condemned "certain other people without a hearing on hearsay, opinion and perjured evidence." Ickes, in commenting on the hearing, denied implications that anyone in the Interior Department had intimidated witnesses. Affidavits charging perjury aganst one witness have been filed by the Interior Department with the committee, but they have not been made part of the record.

During the course of the hearing yesterday an affidavit charging Gov. Pearson with being a "liar, thief and hypocrite" was read into the record. It was signed by the Rev. E. G. Anson, of St. Paul's Rectory, St. Croix, Virgin Islands.

"Never in my life," the pastor said in his affidavit referring to the island administration "has such dishonesty flourished."

The Ickes letter, which was sent to Tydings after the committee session at which Judge Wilson testified Monday, but which was

Accuses Probers of Laxity

Drastic Clause Kept As Senate Sends Holding Bill to Conference.

TVA Battle Won By Administration

Representatives Restore 4 Major Amendments; Deny McCarl Rule.

By Robert C. Albright.

After weeks of rebellion over President Roosevelt's power policies,, the Administration's position was suddenly bulwarked yesterday by supporting action at both ends of the Capitol.

Executing a swift reversal of form, the House restored the emasculated TVA amendments to substantially their original scope, while the Senate hurried the Wheeler-Rayburn utility holding company bill to conference, with "death sentence" features intact.

A double-barreled power lobby investigation was simultaneously assured in House and Senate. Without a record vote, the House approved $50,000 for its two-way inquiry into utilities lobbying. The Senate Audit Committee recommended another $50,000 for investigation of all lobbying.

Satisfied with the string of liberalizing TVA amendments adopted yesterday, the House adjourned without a final vote on the bill itself.

A test of how the final ballot probably will go was provided by a last-minute roll-call vote on empowering the Tennessee Valley Authority to duplicate existing transmission lines of private companies.

The added power was approved, 237 to 145, even though the House Military Affairs Committee had specifically recommended against any such extension of authority.

Both Bills Headed for Strife.

Proposing to squeeze "unnecessary" utility holding companies out of existence, the Senate utilities bill now enters a bitter conference tilt with the House, which overrode the President on the "death sentence." The amended TVA bill, entrenching the Tennessee Valley Authority's power foothold, is also headed for conference strife, following probable passage today and a routine trip back to the Senate.

Developments were:

Thomas G. Corcoran, boyish-faced RFC attorney, admitted writing three letters for members to sign in support of the "death sentence;" preparing numerous radio speeches for members, and even supplying material to the President for his utilities message. He denied, however, that he had authority to stop work on the Passamaquoddy Dam project, as Representative Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine, charged he had threatened.

Senator William H. Dieterich (Democrat), Illinois, unexpectedly withdrew his motion to instruct Senate conferees not to insist on the "death sentence." This action was taken only after assurance from Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, that he will report back to the Senate for "instructions" in the event of a conference deadlock over the "death sentence."

Broader Lobby Probe Advocated.

Proposed $150,000 appropriations for a Senate power lobby investigation was cut down to $50,000 by the Senate Audit Committee, and the scope broadened to include "all lobbying activities and all efforts to influence, encourage, promote, or retard legislation, directly or indirectly." An immediate vote was blocked in the Senate, but the resolution will be called up today.

Representative John J. O'Connor, chairman of the Rules Committee, now conducting the House lobby investigation, was attacked in the House by Representative John E. Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi for not supporting the President. He retorted, "We are going into this power lobby * * * faster and farther than the gentleman from Mississippi, or any other self-constituted champion of the people, would go."

The House restored four major

Gold Suit Ban Held Essential To Stabilizing

Cumming's Declaration Comes With Word From Abroad on World Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Two brief, but significant, statements echoed across the Atlantic yesterday to focus international attention on currency stabilization possibilities.

Attorney General Cummings, advocating outlawry of gold clause suits, said "an international agreement to establish a gold standard would be almost impossible" without such legislation.

Only shortly before, in Paris, a prediction that "America, France and England will unite soon for stabilization" was made by Jean Tannery, governor of the Bank of France.

Bearing less directly was a press query reply by President Roosevelt that the Administration was trying in good faith to conform to the silver purchase act. It directs the Treasury to buy the metal until the price reaches $1.29 an ounce or the supply constitutes one-fourth the monetary stocks.

Senators Act.

But as the President commented, two-score senators had signed a letter by Senator Thomas, (Democrat), Oklahoma, urging faster silver buying and stabilization on a gold-silver bi-metallic standard.

Cummings mentioned no time for possible stabilization. The White House and Treasury had no comment on Tannery's remark in an informal luncheon talk. But earlier stabilization invitations by Secretaries Hull and Morgenthau assumed new importance.

Outwardly, at least, this Government has not altered Morgenthau's rule that the initiative in such action must come from abroad.

England's unreadiness so far to talk on means of pegging international exchange was viewed the most doubtful factor in the stabili-

Federal Loans Will Finance Rural Power

3% Advances to Cover All Electrification Project Costs.

The Government's plan to bring electric light and power to thousands of farmers will be financed by 3 per cent loans covering the complete cost of rural electrification projects and payable in 20 years, it was announced yesterday.

The first announcement of details of the plan, for which $100,000,000 in works relief money will be used, also revealed that the Government proposes to finance installation of electric appliances and plumbing on the same terms.

Loans will be made to private companies secured through the general credit of the borrower, Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator said. In other instances and especially on loans to non-profit agencies the line itself will provide the security.

Operation of the rural electrification unit, which heretofore has been something of a mystery, will be different from that of any other section of the $4,000,000,000 works program. In no other instances are loans covering the entire cost of projects being made. The PWA is making grants of 45 per cent of the cost of construction and in some instances lending the remaining 55 per cent of the cost at 4 per cent interest. It was announced there will be no grants for rural electrification.

Cooke said his organization expects to propose to the allotment board in the near future a substantial number of loans to finance construction of power lines.

"The projects slated for early action are shaping up rapidly out of hundreds of project applications that have poured in upon REA (Rural Electrification Administration) from virtually every section of the country," the announcement said.

It was said that these projects al-

Maxie Hurries Home Denying He and D. C. Bride Have Parted

'Just a Lot of Stuff,' Former Champ Says on Arrival Here; Goes to Johns Hopkins, Where Doctors Pronounce His Hands Fit for Battle.

Max Baer was hurrying back home to "the little woman" last night, leaving behind a trail of denials stretching from New York to Washington, via Newark and Baltimore, that there is any rift in his 11-day-old household.

He "couldn't remember" saying the night before that his marriage with his pretty Irish "pumpkin" had "cracked up."

The erstwhile heavyweight champion and bridegroom began dishing out demurrers when he left New York in the morning bound for Newark Airport. He entered his plane shouting, "No!" and his emphasis had mounted to the "No! No!" stage after running the reporters' gantlet at Washington Airport 80 minutes later.

Solemnly pleading that all is well between Mrs. Baer—who was Mary Ellen Sullivan, of the Willard Hotel coffee shop until June 29—and himself, the playboy pugilist was driven from Washington Airport directly to Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, there to reaffirm his love and offer up his battered fists for medical examination.

The doctors' verdict, which was that there are no broken bones and the California butcher boy should be able to re-enter the ring this fall, would have been big news but for the "it's all over now" headline storm which broke around the Baers' ears Tuesday night.

The domestic situation, however, took precedence over the hands problem wherever Baer went. And with consistency which refused to be side-tracked, he maintained that reports of a rift are "screwy" and "just a lot of stuff," that he will be as much in love with his wife ten years from now as he is today, and that he and Mary Kirk Brown are just friends, nothing more.

Miss Brown is the society girl who was photographed having dinner with Baer in a New York cafe Tuesday night. In New York, Newark, Washington and Baltimore Maxie gave the same explanation: He was dining with friends when Miss Brown dropped in, and the boxer, to be polite, invited her to join the party.

Baer was a model patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital, to which he and his manager, Ancil Hoffman, were driven from the airport here.

Non-Explosive Gas, Successful In Engine, Looks Like Cheese

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—Gasoline solidified to look like a piece of cheese was used successfully to run an ordinary gasoline engine in tests announced today at the Guggenheim school of aeronautics, New York University.

The tests bring close to practicability an eight-year search for a safety gasoline, something non-explosive, which will do the same work as liquid gasoline.

In the simple test engine the hard gasoline was more efficient than ordinary gasoline, under exactly the same running conditions. This was announced only as a good sign, and not as a prediction.

The new stuff will not explode. A piece of it the size of a butter pat was stuck on the end of a knife. A lighted match was held close, its flame almost touching. Nothing happened.

When the flame made actual contact, the hard gas lighted as quickly and easily as a sheet of paper. It burned as briskly. But was extinguished more easily. One good puff of breath blew out the flame.

The cheese-like stuff that worked so well is the latest in a series of more than 9,000 batches of hydrocarbons which he has hardened in the search for an efficient, hard gasoline.

The inventor says it costs a quarter cent a gallon to change ordinary gasoline into solid form. He says any kind of gasoline can be so altered. If there is lead in a gasoline, it precipitates out.

One Dead Here in Heat Wave As Midwest Toll Grows to 31

The heat wave in the Midwest had claimed 31 deaths by yesterday. No immediate relief is promised from the merciless sun, which sent temperatures ranging up to 109 degrees.

In Washington one man died and two others were prostrated as the temperature reached 90 degrees at 3:15 p. m.

The toll of death in the Central States as compiled by the Associated Press was as follows:

Oklahoma, 8; Texas, 7; Minnesota, 5; Nebraska, 4; Kansas, 3; Missouri, 2, and Illinois and Iowa, 1 each.

Temperatures were above the 100 mark over a widening area. At Phillipsburg, Kans., it was 109 degrees. Parts of the Oklahoma panhandle were at 107 degrees by noon.

A physician from Casualty Hospital who was called by police said Simpson died of heart disease, probably due to the temperature in his room, which police said was near 100 degrees.

The two prostrations were Thomas Connelly, 28, of 635 I street northwest, who collapsed in the District Building, and George Hunt, 15, who collapsed at his home at 1523 East Capitol street.

A cloudburst north of Baltimore, Md., caused the death of McClelland Johnson, 32-year-old truck driver, according to an Associated Press dispatch. Johnson's truck overturned when it plowed into water 6 feet deep across the Philadelphia road. He was drowned.

Air Expansion Plans Receive Two Setbacks

Wilcox Bill Sidetracked; Fund Cuts Bar Program of 555 Planes.

Plans for the expansion of American aerial power encountered setbacks on two fronts yesterday when Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, revealed that the Wilcox bill to establish a group of major air defense bases had been sidetracked in the Budget Bureau and Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, said a reduced appropriation would not allow the purchase of an anticipated 555 planes for naval fliers.

At the same time Secretary of the Navy Swanson outlined next year's naval building program as including 12 destroyers, 6 submarines and possibly 1 battleship.

The Wilcox measure, which now faces unexpected opposition, was the measure that stirred international comment in April when publication of testimony before the House Military Committee disclosed that officials at the War Department had planned a "camouflaged" air base near the Canadian border as one of the defensive airports authorized in the legislation.

Senator O'Mahoney said it was his understanding that the Budget Bureau had rejected the $125,000,000 plan for six border air bases "as against the financial policy of the President." After publication of the House Military Affairs Committee hearings, President Roosevelt issued a stern rebuke to Chairman John J. McSwain for releasing testimony taken at the hearings, at the same time repudiating the testimony of the officers involved. McSwain later apologized.

O'Mahoney Still Hopeful.

The Wyoming Senator added that despite the set back he believed strong feeling exists in Congress for enactment of the Wilcox bill, which already has passed the House and is pending in the Senate. He indicated that efforts would be made to persuade President Roosevelt to include it in his program.

Various coastal cities have become interested in the establishment of the bases, according to O'Mahoney. "However, if the bill is adopted," he said, "the War Department will appoint a special board to investigate the matter and I have been authoritatively advised that there will be no attempt to select any particular city in advance of the report of such board."

The King statement concerning a reduction in size of the new naval air force came at Secretary Swanson's press conference. When asked concerning aerial power Swanson turned the discussion over to Admiral King, who said it would not be possible to buy as many planes as had been estimated.

He added that the Navy had wanted to buy 555 planes during the coming year, of which 282 would be replacements and 273 additions. Such a program would have required about $40,000,000. But the appropriation provided only $26,700,000 plus $8,500,000 to pay for contracts negotiated during the previous year and $6,600,000 to cover contracts previously authorized, but for which no funds were made available.

Competition Denied.

King disclosed that the Navy has a number of experimental planes under construction or being tested. He listed these as two torpedo bombers, two single seater fighters, two dive bombers, two battleship observation planes and several scout bombers.

In outlining next year's naval construction program, Swanson disclaimed that this country "was starting any competition."

He added that no decision had been reached about the battleship, but that the ranking admirals of the Navy feel it would be cheaper to build a new one than modernize one.

Swanson's announcement of next year's program was made after he had called for bids on 13 of this year's vessels. These will be opened August 7, and will complete the current American quotas in aircraft carriers and light cruisers. The three heavy cruisers already under construction will fill the quotas in that group. Next year's program, as announced yesterday, conforms to the provisions of existing treaties for building up the fleet to the limitations of tonnage and for the replacement of obsolete vessels.

The Secretary asserted that the Navy intends to abide by both the Washington and London naval treaties, which expire December 31, 1936, unless some other signatory nation presses beyond them. The one battleship contemplated would replace the U. S. S. Arkansas. A total of seven of this country's 15 battleships will pass their twentieth birthdays before January 1, 1937, and therefore can be replaced in accordance with the treaties.

Cloak and Suit Peace Is Virtually Assured

New York, July 10 (AP).—The end of a four-month dispute in the cloak and suit industry was virtually assured today with ratification of an agreement by representatives of manufacturers and workers following negotiations started by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman.

The dispute, which centered on a contract clause by which jobbers would be limited to a fixed number of contracting firms, recently resulted in a stoppage which threw an estimated 20,000 workers out of employment and brought the threat of a general strike.

The agreement reached by the workers and manufacturers will be put before the jobbers for ratification today, and it was expected that idle workers will return to work by the end of the week.

Between You and Me

President's Health Good; Fantastic Rumors Indicate Puzzled Public State of Mind.

By Raymond Clapper

IT might be questionable to refer to the whispering campaign about President Roosevelt's health and state of mind except for the fact that the gossip which has permeated the whole country since the hot weather set in, is so utterly without foundation that he is not sensitive about it.

He treats it as he does any other false rumor.

At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt's attention was called to these reports and he was asked by Mr. Francis Stephenson, of the Associated Press, how he felt.

The President threw back his head and laughed and asked the reporter what he thought.

Mr. Roosevelt suggested the reporter ought to be a pretty good judge.

Whispering has taken all sorts of fantastic forms. Mr. Roosevelt's illness of some years ago has affected him mentally. When Senator Borah called recently the President did not recognize him. Another caller found him throwing papers about the room wildly. At a press conference he lost control and had to be taken from the room. These stories are so false that they are ludicrous. Washington newspaper correspondents are enjoying them thoroughly. Each new one is eagerly passed around for the entertainment of the press gallery. That's how much credence this group of independent, fishy-eyed observers, who see Mr. Roosevelt twice a week, places in them.

These reporters will testify that as of July 10, 1935, President Roosevelt appeared in the best of health and spirits and of sound mind, that his face was tanned and that his cheeks had good color, that his hand was steady when he lighted a cigarette, that his eyes were bright and his answers to questions alert, that he joked about the weather and recommended his new seersucker suit for Washington summer wear.

Many of these reporters have seen Harding and Hoover grow querulous and moody on less provocation than Roosevelt had in this case. And as for the cool and calm Coolidge, his irritability is still commented on by the White House staff. Of the four, Roosevelt is the most pleasant and even-tempered from the point of view of the regular executive staff which works at close quarters with him.

These rumors represent, insofar as they are not deliberately designed to discredit the Administration, a blind groping by the public for some explanation of the puzzling activities at Washington lately. They indicate what has been pointed out here repeatedly, that the public has lost contact with the President, that it does not understand what he is doing, and that it is bewildered and increasingly suspicious of the wisdom of some of the President's actions. These suspicions have suddenly taken an exaggerated and fantastic form in rumors which can be dismissed more readily than the state of mind which they indicate in the country.

In recovery and reemployment the United States appears to be lagging behind other industrial nations. The National Industrial Conference Board reports that industrial production continued to advance in May in England, Canada, Germany, Italy, Belgium and several other countries. It remained unchanged in France and Switzerland. In the Netherlands, Mexico and the United States, it dropped.

Unemployment declined in May in leading European countries, but increased a shade in the United States, where reform seems to be making more headway than recovery.

Recovery in the wheat belt, however, is due to take a spurt because of the jumping of the AAA benefit payments. This means that $17,053,000 in Federal money will go into North Dakota on wheat alone this year, $3,000,000 more than last year. South Dakota will draw $725,000 more this year, a total of $5,995,000. Minnesota will receive $277,000 more, or a total of $2,224,000. Montana will receive $7,494,000, a jump of $895,000. Nebraska will come in for about the same amount, and Kansas about twice that figure, some $28,154,000.

Processing taxes, which provide the money for these payments, are falling off as a result of court suits impounding these revenues. But nothing like that is going to stand in the way of making the wheat belt safe for the Democratic Party.

Political parade: W. Forbes Morgan, secretary of the Democratic National Committee, concedes that the Roosevelt Administration's popularity is off slightly in parts of New York State and New England, which is a conservative statement, all right . . . The recent third party conference at Chicago represented nobody but its promoters . . . Gov. Olson, Minnesota's Farmer-Labor Governor, will be too busy running for the Senate next year to help any third party presidential ticket. Minnesota Democrats may put a senatorial candidate up against him. That's going to make a problem for the national committee, which needs Olson's good-will for Roosevelt . . . One reporter says the Virgin Island investigation, which has made Secretary Ickes so irate, is a tempest in a rum pot . . . Chairman Fletcher, of the Republican National Committee, has appointed Harry J. Brown, Washington correspondent of the Salt Lake Tribune, to handle publicity. . . . Thomas G. Corcoran is one of the few New Dealers who broke in under the Hoover Administration. He was at RFC before Roosevelt took over. But they didn't let him run loose around Congress in those days. . . . Young Senator Holt was observed to yawn a few minutes before he made his maiden speech. A famous young British statesman made himself famous by similarly yawning on his first appearance before the House of Lords. But he followed it up with a brilliant speech . . . The Cleveland Republican conference adopted resolutions calling for immediate cash payment of the bonus and a balanced budget. If the Republicans can do that, they're good.

Dickinson's Name Is Sent to Senate

Rumor He Would Succeed Roper Set at Rest.

President Roosevelt yesterday asked the Senate to approve his appointment of John Dickinson, now Assistant Secretary of Commerce, as Assistant Attorney General. Dickinson, former professor of law at Pennsylvania University, will be in charge of the anti-trust division. He will succeed Harold M. Stevens, who becomes Attorney General Cummings' immediate assistant.

Appointment of Dickinson put to rest a report that he was to succeed Daniel C. Roper as Secretary of Commerce and that Roper would become Postmaster General, succeeding James A. Farley, expected to resign to take charge of the forthcoming Democratic campaign.

Asked about reports that he would succeed Farley, Secretary Roper "assigned" reporters to run down their source.

"All I know about it is what I read in the papers," he said.

Tax on Wealth Hearing Sped By Crackdown

House Group Dismisses 2 Witnesses for Straying From Subject.

By the Associated Press.

Democrats cracked down on testimony yesterday in an attempt to speed the President's wealth tax bill to House passage in two weeks.

As a result, Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, said he expected the House Ways and Means Committee hearings on the wealth distribution tax plan could be concluded by Saturday. He added that the committee ought to be able to draft a bill and get it ready for House action by the end of the next week.

Faster work on the tax measure was one of the things urged by the President at Tuesday night's White House conference. Conferees were reliably reported to have urged that since Congress had to stay in session until the tax bill passed, it should keep unwanted legislation from forcing its way through.

May Reduce "Must" List.

The understanding developed from that conference was to seek adjournment the last week in August, if possible. Until the tax bill is put on the statute books—and the tentative adjournment date reached—other measures heretofore labelled "must" will be pushed. A possibility was indicated that some—including the ship subsidy, Bankhead tenant farmer and food and drug administration amendment bills—might be dropped.

In its drive for swifter progress, the Ways and Means Committee today "excused" two of its witnesses when they strayed from a discussion of the gift, inheritance, corporation, and individual income taxes outlined in the President's message.

One such witness was H. E. Miles, who said he represented the Fair Tariff League. He was leading up to advocacy of stiff taxes on "excess profits of trusts" when Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, asked him what President Roosevelt thought of that idea.

Holds President "Morally Deficient."

Miles replied, among other things, that the President was "morally deficient." Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, told Miles he "ought to be ashamed," and his motion that Miles be "excused" and his remarks "expunged" from the record carried without debate.

A little later George L. Marklan, listed as a representative of the Philadelphia Board of Trade, opposed taxes to redistribute wealth. He added that Rockefeller and Ford should not be taxed, because they had built up the country. This time, after several other similar remarks had been made, Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, interposed, and Marklan, too, was "excused."

As a result of the speed, all witnesses who had asked to be heard yesterday had testified before the noon recess, and no afternoon session was held.

While the hearings proceeded, Chairman Harrison announced that the Senate Finance Committee would not open hearings until the House Committee had concluded its hearings and framed a bill.

Atlanta, July 10 (AP).—Declaring the Interstate Commerce Commission "ought to be abolished" Gov. Eugene Talmadge today voiced resentment against the I. C. C.'s order increasing class freight rates between points in Georgia.

"Excessive transportation rates brought about this depression," the Governor said. "You can't have profitable commerce with exhorbitant freight rates."

Hurley Berates Administration On 'Subterfuge'

Tells G. O. P. Group 'Attack on Constitution Is Significant.'

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 10.—The Democratic Party was accused today by Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War under President Hoover, of attempting to change the Constitution by "subterfuge" and of repudiating both its 1932 platform and the pre-election promises of President Roosevelt.

In a speech prepared for delivery to a Republican meeting at the Hamilton Club, Hurley declared "when we do come out of the depression it will not be because of the New Deal policies, but because the New Deal policies have been defeated."

He called upon the Republican Party to lead "the revolt of the people against coercion," and said the final defense of the Constitution "must be made at the polls."

"The attack of the New Deal upon the Constitution is significant," he said. "Certainly it would be easier for a dictator to govern America under a collectivist form of government than under a democracy. * * *

"The attempt to centralize the Government and make it the master of the people has not been completely stopped by the decisions of the Supreme Court. The same Machiavellian language is still being used in the preamble of every act of Congress introduced by the New Dealers for the purpose of circumventing the Constitution, while appearing to operate under it.

"The Constitution should not be changed by subterfuge. If it is to be changed the people have a right to consider the proposed changes and to approve or reject them."

Touching on "Democratic promises," Hurley said, "The Democratic Party has repudiated the pre-election declarations of its leader, the President. It has repudiated that statesman-like document known as the Chicago platform. What promises can the Democratic Party now make to the people that can reasonably be believed and relied upon by the people?"

Hurley declared that, counter to promises, the New Deal "created the greatest bureaucracy in the history of this Republic, created the most stupendous debt in the history of our Nation and created the greatest deficit our Government has ever had."

Rehabilitation Of Flood Area In N. Y. Pushed

Relief, Rebuilding Under Way; Damage Is Set at $25,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., July 10.—Rehabilitation of flood-ravaged up-State New York moved forward steadily tonight under State and Federal Government supervision as swollen creeks and rivers receded under clear skies leaving 40 dead and property damage astimated at more than $25,000,000.

An Associated Press survey said the total death toll in five States, including New York, was 52.

More than 3,000 persons still were temporarily homeless, 24 hours after the last rain of consequence had fallen in the flood zone.

Wreckage-littered streets and highways were being cleared, returning refugees worked unceasingly to make mud-filled and twisted homes habitable, utility services were being restored to normal and telephone communication was resumed.

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, personally directing State activities, said the situation was "improving generally at all points." He obtained $300,000 from the State temporary emergency relief administration for removal of debris in the ten-county area in south central New York.

Disease Still Threat.

The danger of disease still threatened, however, bringing a joint plea from the Governor and health authorities that all drinking water in the stricken area be boiled.

By land and air, typhoid anti-toxin for inoculation purposes was sent into several communities, principally Watkins Glen, Horneil, Ithaca, Corning and Trumansburg.

Health authorities explained that two weeks are required for development of typhoid fever and that the measures were entirely precautionary. No outbreaks of disease have been reported in any flood-stricken section, they said.

The American Red Cross, supervised by Robert E. Bondy, national director of disaster relief, set up headquarters in Elmira, from where trained workers were sent into devastated communities with the word that "unlimited funds" are available. Two Army planes surveyed the area.

Heavy Damage.

Steuben, Broome and Tompkins counties reported the heaviest damage, with $5,000,000 each, while Chenango and Schuyler counties estimated a loss of $3,000,000 each.

Delaware County suffered damage of $2,000,000, Otsego, $750,000, and Schoharie, $125,000. State officials estimated $3,500,000 damage to State property, including parks, highways and bridges.

Meanwhile, the crop damage was so heavy because of the record-breaking rains that the United States Department of Agriculture bureau at Ithaca said it can not make a true estimate of the loss for several days.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 10.—The State threw itself today into the task of clearing away the flood damage of eastern Pennsylvania's swollen streams.

As the flood waters through much of the stricken area subsided, at least nine were dead and hundreds of thousands of dollars in property loss was estimated.

Towns were isolated, homes and other buildings carried away, bridges, highways and rail lines washed out. But today the danger was definitely passing.

By the Associated Press.

New Hope, Pa., July 10.—Four hundred boys were confined to the Philadelphia Boy Scout camp on Treasure Island by the flood waters of the Delaware River today, but officials were confident the camp would not be endangered.

Treasure Island, north of Trenton, N. J., is one of the many camping sites along the river, both on shore and on islands.

Unofficial estimates had the river rising at the rate of 11 inches an hour, but camp officials explained it will have to go considerable higher before it reaches the camp.

There is a motor launch at the camp with a capacity of 20 persons.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—The rescue of 25 children in the flooded village of Canisteo in Steuben County was reported today by the State temporary emergency relief administration.

The children and infants had been without food and clothing for 48 hours until a TERA refrigerator truck, bearing milk, bottles and nipples, reached Canisteo over washed-out hill roads.

In the town, isolated by the flooded Canisteo River and without telephone or telegraph communication, 48 pesons were reported by the TERA to have been sharing four beds.

France to Begin National Air Mail

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 10.—France's first domestic air-mail service was inaugurated officially today, with four planes scheduled to start from Le Bourget, the metropolitan airport.

The new air-mail system was designed to make daily postal deliveries between Paris and the most distant provincial cities.

Sponsored by Georges Mandel, former minister of communications, the network radiating from the capital included Le Havre, Lille, Strasbourg, Toulouse, Bordeaux, Nantes, Marseille and Cannes.

The mails are to be transported by "Air Bleu," a private company, with the expenses to be met solely by postage.

The thrifty buyer will find the car he wants in Post Want Ads today. It's a 1929 Chrysler Sedan and you can own it for only $165.

New York Floods Inundate, Wreck Towns

So rapidly did the Chenango River at Binghamton, N. Y., rise that motorists in Oak street had to leave these cars and race for higher ground while the water almost submerged them.

Man Drowned In Vain Effort To Rescue Two

Jobless D. C. Negro Dies With Girl and Boy Caught in River Channel.

Sterling Calhoun, unemployed colored man, died a hero's death yesterday when he drowned in Anacostia River after vainly trying to save the lives of two children struggling in the deep waters of the channel off Buzzards Point.

The two children were Mary Kerns, 14, and her brother Richard, 10, children of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Kerns, 117 L street southwest. Kerns, the father of eight children, is an unemployed lather.

Mary and Richard, wading in the water at the foot of First street southwest, stepped beyond their depth. Calhoun, fishing nearby, leaped fully clothed into the water, 30 feet deep at the point.

Calhoun seized Mary and brought her to the surface. He lost his grip, however, as the child struggled. Alber Wingert, a member of the nearby Corinthian Yacht Club, fishing from a boat a short distance away, rowed to the scene.

In attempting to drag Calhoun from the water, Wingert lost his balance and plunged into the channel. He dived several times, but was unable to save either Calhoun or the children. Albert Seeley, another yacht club member, dragged Calhoun's body ashore.

The Fire Department rescue squad was called out and recovered the girl's body. They worked over it and over Calhoun's for more than an hour.

Harbor police dragged the channel and late in the afternoon recovered Richard's body.

The two children had been playing near the Zelotype Corporation's yards and had been warned not to go wading in the nearby water. They left and evidently returned later, disobeying the warning. Witnesses said they either must have stepped from the shallow water into the channel or else were not strong enough to withstand the strong current.

Mrs. Kerns, called by neighbors, identified the body of her daughter, who only recently had been graduated from Jefferson High School. She became hysterical and was placed under the care of a physician.

Calhoun, father of three children, the oldest of whom is 7 and the youngest 3 months, had until recently been on the relief rolls. He had left his tenement home yesterday morning hoping to catch fish for dinner.

Witnesses were outspoken in praise of Calhoun, who was said to have been a good swimmer. They thought he drowned when he could not shake the grip of one of the children.

A few hours after the drowning, Mrs. Annie E. Jonscher, of 1343 Shepherd street northwest, walked into police headquarters and left with Acting Lieut. Joe Connor a check for $10.

"It's a donation toward Calhoun's burial," she said. "I read in the papers that he was on the relief rolls and leaves three small children. No man of such courage should die without a decent burial."

Ex-Head of Bank, Jailed As Thief, Is Pardoned

Boston, July 10 (AP).—Edwin T. McKnight, former president of the closed Medford Trust Co., serving a sentence at Norfolk State Prison Colony as "a common and notorious thief," was granted a pardon today by Gov. Jomes M. Carley and the executive council.

McKnight, once president of the State Senate, recently was reported in ill-health at the prison colony.

Troops Called To Aid Chinese In Flood's Zone

Thousands Are Destitute as Yangtze Overflow Ruins Rich Area.

Hankow, China, (Thursday), July 11.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek today mobilized civil and military authorities of seven flood-stricken provinces to bring relief to uncounted thousands made destitute by the great, swollen Yangtze and its flooding tributaries.

A vast inland lake 600 miles across and many miles wide, the Yangtze, "China's sorrow," tumbled onward toward the sea, spreading death and destruction through eight rich provinces in the nation's heart. The waters wiped out homes, crops, farm animals and human life in the most prosperous and populous areas of the nation.

With estimates of the loss of life and property yet unmade, every hour brought reports of new flood ravages. A wireless message from Changsha said city walls facing the Siang River collapsed. A score died as inrushing waters crushed houses. Mission hospitals at Changsha were doing relief work and preparing to deal with possible epidemics.

Wuhu reported an unidentified oil steamer caught in whirling currents overturned with unknown casualties. A new and serious breach of the Yangtze occurred opposite Tatung, 50 miles above Wuhu.

Many thousands of southern Anhwei peasants—who short months ago were suffering the ravages of drought and consequent famine, and since had been seeking their existence on the southern shores of the Yangtze near Wuhu—watched the roaring river flood their shacks and engulf their small farm plots.

Borah and King Weigh D. C. Judge Selections

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday named Senators King (Democrat), of Utah, and Borah (Republican), of Idaho, as a subcommittee to consider the nominations of Walter J. Casey and Ellen K. Raedy and reappointments of Nathan Cayton and George C. Aukman as Municipal Court judges.

Senator King said that he did not know how soon the sub-committee may act on the nominations. No formal opposition has been voiced so far to the appointments.

Ship Subsidy Bill Doomed, Says Senator

Copeland Predicts Measure for Mail Contracts Will Not Be Passed.

By the Associated Press.

A slow death for ship subsidy legislation at this session of Congress appeared yesterday to have been decreed by the Administration.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Commerce Committee, said there was little likelihood that the House-approved bill would pass the Senate unless the Administration came to its rescue.

In informed Administration quarters there was little expectation that this would be done.

Failure to enact the legislation will leave President Roosevelt faced with the problem of revising or canceling the ocean mail contracts of 42 shipping concerns by October 31.

"And he will have 42 lawsuits on his hands as a result," Copeland said. "As I understand the law, the President is required to make this revision or cancellation. He can make whatever adjustment of the existing ocean mail contracts he thinks is fair. Then the shipping concerns can go into the Court of Claims to present their views."

The Copeland-Bland ship subsidy bill drew lukewarm support from the Administration in the beginning. Secretary Roper wrote the House Commerce Committee that it had the approval of the Commerce Department, but said simultaneously that it differed in two important respects from the form of legislation requested by the President.

He flatly disapproved another measure to build up and maintain an American merchant marine because it was "primarily a Government ownership bill and is built up around a principle to which this department can not give its approval."

The two points on which the ship subsidy bill differed from the Presidential request were provisions continuing the practice of making loans for shipbuilding, and setting up a maritime authority to handle shipping affairs instead of putting the quasi-legal phases in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In informed official quarters it was said that substantial changes probably would have to be made in the bill before the Administration might be expected to bring full pressure behind it.

Coxey for Inflation To Aid Unemployed

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Neb., July 10.—Jacob S. Coxey, 81, Massillon, Ohio, arrived for the national Farmer-Labor convention here today advocating a 50-billion-dollar currency inflation to pay $100 a month to "every one of the 13,000,000 unemployed."

The one-time leader of Coxey's army said he had no ambitions politically.

"The money question," said the party's 1932 presidential candidate, "boils itself down into a question between the gold standard and the human standard. Place $100 in the hands of each unemployed person in the country and their buying would clean the shelves of every merchant in a week."

New N. Y. Police Dubbed 'X Men'

La Guardia Coins Title for College Graduate Unit.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—Mayor LaGuardia today coined the title "X Men" to apply to New York City's force of "G Men" he has ordered organized.

He also declared that all of the "X Men" must be college graduates "because college training teaches men how to think."

The "X Men," he said, need not have legal training, "but must have four years of academic or professional courses." Several accountants would be in the corps, he said.

He declined to say what the salary of "X Men" would be, but indicated he would seek an appropriation on the city budget.

State Liquor Ballots End.

Raleigh, N. C., July 10 (AP).—The last of the eighteen counties which the 1935 Legislature authorized to hold liquor referendums had acted today and the result was: Sixteen counties voted for liquor control, one against and one was restrained from voting.

Roper Expects Trade Advisers To Stay on Job

Action Is Slated to Fill Vacancies and Select New Chairman.

Secretary Roper made it clear yesterday that he expects the business advisory council of the Commerce Department to continue to function. He said he believed it to be increasingly important that business have a direct voice in Government affairs.

The executive committee of the council was meeting yesterday preparatory to a meeting of the full council, composed of some 30 leading business men, today.

Because there have been five resignations from the group recently and because some of the members are said to feel that advice of the council has not been given sufficient consideration by Government officials there have been reports that it might be disbanded.

After the executive committee meeting it was said that recommendations for appointments to fill the vacancies caused by resignations will be made and a new chairman will be selected. The chairmanship at present is held by Harry B. Kendall, but under the council organization the office rotates. Kendall will remain a member of the council.

A statement of policy is expected after the meeting today. It was said the council may begin one or two more studies of Government activities of particular interest to business.

Policy Law Violation Laid to Colored Man

Ernest C. Winfield, 32, colored, was charged with operating a lottery after his arrest yesterday for alleged violation of the policy law at Seventh and Q streets northwest.

Sergt. George Deyoe, of the vice squad, said Winfield had $335 and about 2,000 numbered slips on him.

Robinson Dares Crop Rule Foes To Do Better

Congress Can Not Scrap AAA Program, Thunders Democratic Leader.

By the Associated Press.

The New Deal crop control program was brought before the Senate yesterday and its foes were bluntly challenged to produce a better farm-aid plan.

"If anyone here—and I don't care what his politics—can find a way of stabilizing prices without controlling production," thundered Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, "he will do a favor to this country and to the world if he will bring forward his plan now.

"This Congress dare not abandon it (the AAA program) or change it, I make that challenge."

Senators Caught Napping.

The farm adjustment program was opened to senatorial fire through the House-approved Administration AAA amendments intended to clinch the constitutionality of the control law and revise it. But, caught napping by the abrupt disposal of the utilities bill, Senators passed over until today the major changes to the AAA program.

Among these were:

The "order" system for bringing compliance of processors with the farm marketing agreements.

The list of commodities subjected to marketing agreements from which wool and mohair were eliminated at the suggestion of Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho.

The proposed compensatory tax on rayon and other competitors of cotton.

Amendments Passed Over.

Also passed over were amendments by the Senate Agriculture Committee striking out provisions of the bill, as it passed the House, which would permit the use of 30 per cent of the Nation's tariff receipts in building up domestic and foreign markets and adding a provision for increasing the tariff to shut out imports of agricultural commodities where they appeared to interfere with the marketing program.

Opposition to the bill came from both sides of the chamber. Borah has presented amendments striking out all of the amendments seeking to validate present processing taxes fixed by Secretary Wallace and Senator Byrd (Republican), Virginia, turned in a handful striking out other major features of the measure.

King (Democrat), Utah, assailed the bill as aimed at "complete regimentation of the American people with respect to all commodities."

But Robinson contended "farmers and the people generally recognize" that the AAA had "accomplished" its fundamental purpose.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, assailed the Senate amendment wiping out the House provision for increasing tariffs to offset rising American costs of production.

Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Agriculture Committee, retorted that the present provision in the law for increasing the tax an amount equal to the processing tax was sufficient.

Walmsley Aids Desert Faction Fighting Long

'Old Regulars' Consider Compromise Steps in New Crisis.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, July 10.—The city administration of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, swaying under drastic legislative burdens, today was considering offering the palm leaf to Senator Huey P. Long to end political strife in New Orleans.

Confronted with new legislative acts stripping him of his local patronage and depriving the city of its taxing powers by delegating that authority to the State, Mayor Walmsley asembled his leaders in secret caucus to map a plan of action.

Seriousness of the situation facing the Walmsley faction, the "old regulars," was increased when City Commissioner A. Miles Pratt and Joseph P. Skelly openly broke with the mayor and announced they would no longer oppose the Louisiana "dictator."

Committee Named.

Withdrawal of Pratt and Skelly immediately gave rise to reports they would lead a movement to swing the entire city organization over to Long. However, these were partly dispelled when the caucus adopted a resolution expressing confidence in the mayor's fight against Long control.

Simultaneously, the "old regular" leaders authorized the appointment of a committee of seven by the mayor "to act in the interest of the regular Democratic organization."

The extent of the committeemen's authority was not known, but it was learned from authoritative sources that they are free, if they desire, to negotiate directly with Senator Long or his representatives relative to striking a peace agreement.

The committee will be instructed to submit its recommendations at a second caucus Monday.

Cite Peace Aims.

Senator Long said he knew nothing of the "old regular" activity.

"I know nothing about it except what I read in the newspapers," he said. "I've been too busy reading and writing laws and studying court cases to bother with that."

Senator Long said he "hoped" to leave soon for Washington.

Answering the statement of Commissioners Pratt and Skelly announcing withdrawal of their support from Walmsley because of their "desire to bring peace to the city," Mayor Walmsley said:

"I, too, want peace, but not at any price. We have simply defended ourselves from constant raids by brigands who have taken money that belongs to the City of New Orleans."

"I won't quit," he added. "I would rather be right than President."

Sisson Denies Court's Power To Void Laws

Says in Charlottesville Talk That Tribunals Lack Such Authority.

derstanding among those having the program in charge. Demarest Lloyd, leader of the round table—which is being conducted in cooperation with the American Liberty League—uninformed that university authorities had given Sisson permission to speak on the Supreme Court issue, mildly chided him for making a speech off the topic of the day.

Sisson angrily retorted that he had spoken on a subject close to his heart and that as a busy Congressman he did not have time to sit around and write papers on all conceivable subjects as did the members of the Liberty League. In the end Lloyd invited Sisson to remain over for tomorrow's discussion.

It is apparent that the audience attending this round-table discussion does not like the American Liberty League or its speakers, since every shot at the league is applauded and most of the heckling is directed to their orators.

Cites Dred Scott Case.

In developing his argument Sisson pointed out that there was nothing in the Constitution which gave the Supreme Court authority to adjudge acts of Congress unconstitutional and there was nothing in the histories of the constitutional convention to indicate that the framers of the Constitution had any such intention.

He contended that a long line of Presidents—Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Grant and Theodore Roosevelt—had criticized the court for its assumption of this power and none had conceded the validity of the power. He asserted that when John Marshall in Marbury versus Madison asserted the court had the power of judicial veto, he was engaged in obiter dictum.

The first occasion when the court exercised the power, he continued, was in declaring invalid the Missouri compromise in the Dred Scott decision, which he held responsible for the Civil War. He cited the legal tender cases and again the first income tax law, the Federal employers liability act, the child labor law and the more recent legislation held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

He argued that in each of these cases, the court was "exercising, not a judicial function but a legislative or a sociological function," and he added that in none of these cases, from the Dred Scott down to this spring "has the court really safeguarded either the rights of the people or the rights of the States."

Finds Anomaly.

"On the contrary," he continued, "it has caused such a derangement of the functions of the Government itself, as have, in some instances, required curing either by constitutional amendment or by a reversal by the court of its own decisions."

It might be said by some, he added, that the court's decision in the Schechter case was "of constructive service." He agreed that the NRA was "too hastily put together and that some of its provisions were unworkable," but he held that the NRA when it was adopted in the midst of an economic crisis had served its purpose.

Finally the New Yorker declared the fact "that an act may be passed by the Congress, representing the sovereign will of a sovereign people, approved by the executive, also representing all of the people, that men may order their businesses and their lives, make their contracts and engagement under such law for years—only to have it stricken down years later by the assumed unconstitutional exercise of power by an appointive judiciary is, I say, an unjealous and unbearable state of affairs and one wherein we shall fall short of the ability to exercise the sovereign powers of a nation."

"It may not always be easy to draw the line between the State and the national powers," he asserted. "I am as much of a believer in State rights as anyone. But there must be no gap between the State powers and the national powers."

Hull Cautions 'Go Slow' Policy On Neutrality

Disadvantage of Proposed Legislation Pointed Out to Senators.

By the Associated Press.

A "go slow" procedure of neutrality legislation was ordered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday after a warning by Secretary Hull.

The State Department chief, in an executive session talk with the committee, cautioned that several proposals of the Senate Munitions Committee to reduce opportunity for America's embroilment in foreign conflict, as presently worded, might place this country at a disadvantage with other neutrals.

The current Italo-Ethiopian situation, Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Foreign Relations Committee said, had been discussed in the course of general talk on neutrality situations.

Study Is Planned.

The committee decided to appoint a sub-committee to conduct a joint study with a State Department group that has been surveying the situation for a year, before taking any action on three measures recommended by the munitions investigators.

These proposals would authorize the President to proclaim an embargo on all exports of arms and munitions to foreign warring nations, specifying articles of contraband as those so defined by the belligerents; prohibit public and private loans to nations at war, and bar passports for Americans desiring to travel to war zones.

Two of the measures—relating to passport and credit bans—already had been approved by the Foreign Relations group, but Pittman said he had been authorized, after Hull's appearance in executive session, to withdraw them for reconsideration.

Whole Policy Discussed.

The committee, Pittman said, went over the whole American foreign policy before, during and since the World War, with Hull and R. Walton Moore, Assistant Secretary of State.

Pittman said both the committee and the State Department wanted some "definite rules" of neutrality, but that Hull and committee members had foreseen difficulties unless some agreement could be reached in advance by all world powers.

Speaking of the Italo-Ethiopian situation, Pittman said:

"The policy our Government has adopted toward the Ethiopian situation is entirely within its existing legal rights and is not a disturbing factor in this situation at all."

The Nevadan said Hull had informed the committee the "primary purpose of this Government is to act so as to lead toward peace, and, secondly, in event of war, to conduct ourselves so far as is consistent with the manner of our Government and the necessity of our trade and commerce throughout the world in formulating policies."

Rupert Hughes To Be Eulogist At Long's Rites

Body of Magazine Editor Who Killed Self Will Be Cremated.

By the Associated Press.

Beverly Hills, Calif., July 10.—Rupert Hughes, noted author, will conduct the funeral tomorrow of his close friend, Ray Long, writer and magazine editor, who apparently killed himself yesterday because of illness and discouragement over his career.

Only about 20 of Long's friends will attend the services, which will be at 2 p. m., Pacific standard time, in a mortuary. The body will be cremated and the ashes placed in a vault pending decision as to final disposal. Hughes will deliver a brief eulogy.

Long was found dying in the bedroom of his home last night, a shotgun at his side. There was no note, Coroner Frank Nance said the police report establishing the suicide would be accepted, and there would be no inquest.

Long's friends said illness, combined with the fact he felt his career was on the wane, probably prompted him to his act.

Born March 23, 1878, in Lebanon, Ind., Long advanced rapidly in the literary field, in 1919 becoming editor in chief of the International Magazine Co., a position which he held until 1931. After a trip to the South Seas he came back to movie work in Hollywood.

E. B. Hatrick, former associate of Long, said the private funeral was planned at the request of the widow, now in the East.

Rites to Observe Lincoln's Battle

Anniversary of Ft. Stevens Encounter Planned.

The Civil War battle of Fort Stevens, in which Abraham Lincoln faced enemy fire, will be commemorated in anniversary rites today and tomorrow. The ceremonies will take place on the battle site, now Thirteenth and Rittenhouse streets northwest.

The fighting was precipitated by an advance of Southern forces on the Capital. Confederate soldiers had forded the Potomac River, and were striking south along the Georgia avenue pike, when they were stopped by fire from Fort Stevens. The battle became famous because President Lincoln, who was at the fort, stepped out, exposing himself to Confederate fire.

The Grand Army of the Republic and Fort Stevens Post No. 32, American Legion, have arranged services of commemoration for 6:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries will be the principal speaker, while Miss Emma F. Hayward will preside. Ied by Commander W. H. Hargrave, Fort Stevens Post will attend in a body, and the Drum and Bugle Corps will appear in concert.

The program will be public.

Allen Opposes Citizens Group To Check Crime

Commissioner Disapproves Plan for Committee in D. C.

Opposition to appointment of a special citizens committee which would be charged with the duty of checking crime conditions and the efficiency of District law enforcement agencies was expressed yesterday by Commissioner George E. Allen.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, who has immediate supervision of the police and fire departments, already has expressed doubts about the desirability of such a committee.

A citizens' checking committee was suggested in a report filed with Commissioner Hazen several days ago by a special committee of District officials. The committee was composed of E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and Capt. Howard F. Clark, assistant engineer commissioner.

A similar suggestion had been advanced by witnesses before the special House District Crime Committee, of which Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, was chairman.

Advocates of the plan are pointing to its effectiveness in operation in Baltimore. There is a definite move on foot to provide for the committee and to supply funds for its operation. When the plans of the advocates are sufficient by advanced they are expected to be laid before the Commissioners with a demand for approval.

Data Offered On Kidnap Role Of Mrs. Waley

U. S. Seeks to Show Active Part in Weyerhaeser Heir's Seizure.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., July 10.—Evidence designed to picture Mrs. Margaret Waley as an active participant in the $200,000 kidnaping of George Weyerhaeuser was brought into her trial by the Government today.

The bob-haired Mrs. Waley, in her statement to officers after her arrest in Salt Lake City, allegedly said she never was in the attic of the kidnap gang's hide-out house in Spokane. A. M. Kohn, Government expert from Washington, D. C., testified he found her fingerprints on an electric light globe there.

Kohn's testimony recalled the story of the abducted Tacoma lumber heir that he once heard somebody moving around "upstairs" in the hide-out, and on one occasion heard a woman's voice.

Mrs. Ida Hoxworth, of Spokane, linked the accused young woman and her kidnaper husband, Harmon M. Waley, with William Mahan, fugitive "brains" of the snatch gang, as early as last April 19, although the boy was not seized until May 24.

Placed at House.

Edna Oenning and Mrs. C. A. Larson testified they saw Mrs. Waley at the hide-out house May 31, the day before the boy was released upon payment of the ransom.

In the face of the Government's efforts, John F. Dore, court appointed defense attorney, announced he would ask a directed verdict of acquittal because "they haven't any case against her." She is charged with kidnaping and conspiring to kidnap.

The defense has contended Mrs. Waley knew nothing of the abduction until two days after the boy was seized, and then participated in the crime only because she was dominated by her husband, who pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 45 years.

Mrs. Hoxworth said she and her small daughter, Velma, lived for a time in the house with the Waleys.

The witness said she spent much of the time between April 19 and May 13 with the Waleys and "Billy Davis." She identified a photograph of Mahan as that of "Billy Davis."

Tells of Visit.

Mrs. Larson said she called at the Spokane house the day before little George was released.

"I rang the door bell and Mrs. Waley—that woman—came to the door.

"She seemed very nervous—like this," Mrs. Larson added, twisting her shoulder to illustrate.

Mrs. Hoxworth said she saw a portable typewriter in the house. The ransom notes were typewritten.

William J. McGee, of Spokane, testified he had known Mahan in North Dakota years ago. He identified a picture of the hunted man, who abandoned $15,000 of the ransom money in Butte, Mont., a month ago when pursued by police.

Ed Phillips, former telegraph messenger, testified he delivered a telegram for "A. T. Davis" to the Spokane house on May 12, and that Mrs. Waley signed for it as "Mrs. Davis." One of Mahan's many aliases is A. T. Davis.

Benefit Fund Set Up By Lawrence Disclosed

London, July 10 (AP).—One of the most valuable anonymous benefactions of the late Col. T. E. Lawrence—Lawrence of Arabia—was disclosed today, an education fund for children of killed or wounded Royal Air Force officers.

The fund has expended £4,000 (about $19,460) since 1928 from an endowment fund from the receipts of the sale of "Revolt in the Desert," Lawrence's chronicle of his Arabian campaign during the World War.

Illinois Woman Thought to Be Yohe Daughter

'Secret Child' of Lord Hope and Actress Raised on Western Farm.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, July 10.—The Journal said today it had uncovered "strong evidence" indicating that Hazel Potts, reared by a farm family near St. Peter, Minn., and now Mrs. A. J. Streit, of Waukegan, Ill., may be the daughter of Lord Francis Hope and his former wife, May Yohe, musical domedy star of the 90s.

The former musial omedy star has delared she never had a uhild. Lord Hope onre owned the ill-fated Hope diamond.

First hint of a possible secret page in Miss Yohe's life, the Journal said, came today when it was learned that a Mrs. C. Meure, of Chicago, had sent a telegram to Capt. John A. Smuts, the president hnsband of Miss Yohe, at his home in Maine. The telegram, it was learned, read:

Adopted by Family.

"As a friend of Miss Yohe's dahghter, Olive Hope, would like to know if you would be interested in knowing where she is now located. She was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Potts, St. Peter, Minn."

Mrs. Rose Potts was located today at Waukegan, Ill. She is visiting a sister, Mrs. Charles Seldman, at St. Peter, at present.

Questioned about her adopted daughter, Mrs. Potts said:

"We adopted our daughter, Hazel Potts, at a Catholic foundling home in Minneapolis 33 years ago. At the time we took her we were told that her true name was Olive Hope. The sisters told us they could not reveal the parents' names to us, but they did tell us that the baby's father was a prominent Englishman and that the baby's mother was a talented concert singer. Beyond that we never learned any more about the child's parentage, although we heard hints from time to time that her parents had been very well known and talented persons.

"We changed the child's name to Hazel Potts at the time of the adoption. She was raised at St. Peter. She is now married and living at Waukegan, Ill. I do not know whether she has learned anything additional about her parentage, nor whether she has further reason to believe that her parents were Lord and Lady Hope. It would not surprise me, however, to learn that to be the fact."

Mrs. Streit Believes She Is Daughter

Waukegan, Ill., July 10 (AP).—Mrs. musical comedy star of the '90's.

"The adoption papers in the possession of my foster mother give my mother's name as May Hope," she said.

The blank for her father's name A. J. Streit today said she believed she is the daughter of May Yohe, was not filled in, she said, adding however that evidence uncovered indicated that she is the daughter of the actress and her former husband, Lord Francis Hope.

The adoption papers, Mrs. Streit said, gave her own name as Olive Hope.

Mrs. Streit, who is 35 years old, said she was adopted at a foundling home in Minneapolis by Mrs. Rose Potts, of St. Peter, Minn., 33 years ago and that upon her adoption her name was changed to Hazel Potts. She has known of her parentage for some time, she said.

Women Sending Mates to Jail For Alimony Held Pathological

Answers to Questionnaire So Classifies Majority, Reform League Says; 69 Per Cent Revealed as Suffering From Persecution Complex.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—A majority of the women who send their husbands to alimony jails were classified by the alimony Reform League tonight as "pathological cases."

This conclusion was reached, the league said, after a three-year survey which brought 841 replies to questionnaires, sent to both husbands and wives.

Jack Anthony, executive secretary of the league, emphasized that the answers were studied from a strictly unbiased viewpoint and were submitted to "a number of eminent authorities, including psychologists, pathologists, legal experts and people with common horse sense."

From the answers, it was decided that 69 per cent of the women questioned were pathological cases, suffering from a "persecution mania." Anthony said he was not at liberty to name the experts who studied the replies, but he was not averse to making some of the answers public.

One woman wrote, "My husband has the grace of a hippopotamus, the brain of a gnat, the appearance of a giraffe and the personality of a dead salmon."

The women were judged by their answers to these three questions: (1) Why did you send your husband to jail? (2) Are you satisfied now that your husband is in jail? (3) How long would you like to have him remain there?

Answers to the first question included: "He was a (1) louse, (2) skunk, (3) pig, (4) rat, (5) bedbug, (6) cockroach, (7) snake." Twenty-eight per cent replied simply, "He deserved it."

The second question was answered as follows—63 per cent, very pleased; 21 per cent, sorry; 16 per cent, undecided. Forty-nine per cent of the 552 wives in whom a persecution mania was detected answered the third question with, "Until he rots."

Oklahoma Wife-Killer Goes to Prison for Life

Ninnekah, Okla., July 10 (AP).—Sam Huddleston, 37-year-old farmer, pleaded guilty today to beating his wife to death with a stone and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

At his preliminary hearing yesterday, it was testified Huddleston had accused his wife of infidelity before he took a stone from his pocket and attacked her as their six children looked on.

District Judge George R. Childers said he did not sentence Huddleston to death because he learned the farmer had been confined in an asylum at Little Rock, Ark., for six months.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If your bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c. Advt. © 1935 C. M. Co.

Two Blasts Finish Noted Niagara Rock

By the Associated Press.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 10.—Destruction of Table Rock, favorite spot from which honeymooners have viewed Horseshoe Falls, was completed today by two spectacular dynamite blasts that sent big chunks of stone almost half way across Niagara river.

The two blasts today followed two on July 4, and another pair July 1, when 11,000 tons of rock were sent slithering into the gorge at the foot of the Canadian cataract.

Although the final blasts were smaller than on July 1 and 4, they were more exciting to a crowd of several thousand gathered at all vantage points.

You can save the difference and still have a dependable car if you buy that Pontiac Coach advertised in today's Want Ads for only $185.

Ickes Asserts Islands Inquiry Is 'Whitewash'

Letter to Tydings Scores Procedure, Statement on Judge Wilson.

not made public until yesterday, quoted Tydings as saying:

"So far as I have seen from the testimony adduced, and having absolute confidence in Mr. Wilson's integrity and honesty, I have seen nothing about his conduct in the Virgin Islands in connection with this case that reflects on Mr. Wilson, but it does appear that there is grave ground for the reflection, for the observation that it may reflect on some other people."

"You have been acting as a judge in this hearing," Ickes told Tydings, "and, as a lawyer, I am sure that you will agree with me that this is as extraordinary a statement as has ever been made by a judge before even one side of the case has been presented."

Ickes said that on the stand Judge Wilson made a "self-serving statement."

"There was no cross-examination to test his truthfulness," Ickes continued, "and if any statement ever needed such a test it was his. On the contrary, he had every assistance from you and your lawyers in glossing over his maladministration of the District Court of the Virgin Islands. When his own ingenuity failed him, you or your lawyers would come to his rescue with a leading question or a summation which would help him over his difficulty. Not only was Judge Wilson's testimony self-serving, it was composed of misleading and incomplete statements intended to give an untrue impression."

Ickes told Tydings that before the hearing started the Senator had told him that all he wanted was facts, that he would not permit hearsay evidence and that the hearing would be impartial.

"None of these promises has so far been fulfilled," Ickes said.

Cites Promise.

Ickes then quoted a letter from Tydings, dated April 23, in which the Senator promised to permit a representative of the department to cross-examine witnesses.

"So far," Ickes said, "you have denied this most essential right. Since witnesses were immune from cross-examination, it is not to be wondered at that perjured testimony has crept into the record."

Reverting to Tydings' statement at the hearing Monday, Ickes decleared: "You, in effect, say in advance that any evidence that may hereafter be submitted that tends to give a true picture of Judge Wilson will be disregarded."

"In addition to whitewashing Judge Wilson," Ickes said, 'you prejudge as guilty 'some other people' in the Virgin Islands whose names I take it you will be prepared to announce at your pleasure. You have condemned them without a hearing on hearsay, opinion and perjured evidence."

Ickes repeated his request for the right to cross-examine witnesses "if you are really interested in ascertaining the true facts."

Challenges Wilson.

"I challenge Judge Wilson and his fellow witnesses," he concluded, "to join with me in urging that you permit cross-examination, unless it is for their protection that the cloak of immunity has been thrown around them."

Paul Yates, former assistant to Gov. Pearson and principal witness in the inquiry, told the committee that two Interior Department agents who investigated conditions in the islands told him they were afraid they would lose their obs if they reported the true state of affairs.

Yates put into the record correspondence between him and Ickes revealing that he wrote a letter containing his resignation five days before Ickes sent one dismissing him.

Rural Power To Be Financed With 3% Loans

U. S. Also to Advance Funds to Farmers for Appliances.

ready have met most of the tests of engineering, legal suitability and economic soundness. The tests include the fitness of the undertakings to pay their way as self-liquidating enterprises.

U. S. Mere Lending Agency.

In discussing financing of the projects, Cooke emphasized that no farmers will be asked to mortgage their homes. The erection of lines will be directed by contractors, utility companies, States and subdivisions of States, farmers, and in certain instances the Federal Government. For the most part, however, it was indicated that the Government would act merely as a lending agency. It is expected that money will be loaned to groups of farmers in co-operative organizations.

"REA is dealing on equal terms with all groups willing to undertake to supply farmers with electricity, and able to satisfy REA as to their ability to operate the lines under satisfactory conditions, and to repay the loans," Cooke said.

Municipalities seeking to extend their power lines into rural districts, as well as privately owned utilities and co-operative groups of farmers, will be financed. Operating and holding companies have been invited to present their plans.

Unlike other works administration organizations, the REA does not plan to have any State or regional offices, but will transact all its business from Washington.

Opportunity "Unlimited."

Pointing out that only one American farm in ten has electric service, Cooke said:

"With thoroughgoing co-operation the opportunity for electrical development in the rural field is virtually unlimited. The program of REA should make possible the most remarkable sales increases in rural power in the history of the electrical industry.

"This program has two dominant objectives. One is to bring the economic benefits and the living comforts of electricity to farmers to whom they have heretofore been denied. The other is to promote national recovery by creating new and profitable business for producers of supplies, equipment and appliances, and by providing useful jobs, directly and indirectly, for the largest possible number of workers."

It was explained that the REA is going into the plumbing field in connection with the use of electric pumps.

House Abolition Put Up to Representatives

By the Associated Press.

Hugo Noren, of Pittsburgh, walked right up to one of the most powerful committees of the House yesterday and told it the House was "a useless body."

Testifying before the Ways and Means Committee on the new tax bill, he said:

"We've been destroyed with taxes. What I'd do is abolish all of the Federal Government except the Senate and the Supreme Court."

"Why, that would put us out of jobs!" Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, observed in mock dismay.

"That's what I'm here for," Noren answered, "to convince you that you should be put out of your jobs."

Amid rising laughter from committee members, he added:

zation situation. Also important were accomplishments of the Laval government in the exercise of broad powers to maintain the franc.

Cummings' stabilization remark was made in testimony before the House Banking Committee in behalf of the Administration's bill to block all suits for losses sustained by holders of Government gold-clause bonds as a result of the reduction in the dollar's gold content.

Holds Law Vital.

Without the legislation, Cummings said "a free gold market also would be almost impossible and the strength of the Government to maintain parity might be affected."

The Attorney General told the committee the proposed resolution was constitutional, just, a matter of sound public policy and a means of removing uncertainties.

As the committee opened hearings on the resolution, members spoke of reporting out the measure late today. Speaker Byrns had asserted it could be brought to the floor tomorrow.

Should suits not be forbidden, Cummings said, the Government might face loss of $7,000,000,000 if damages could be shown to have been suffered by holders of the $10,136,570,340 in gold-clause securities now outstanding.

The $7,000,000,000 represents the difference between the face gold value of the securities and their value in dollars in which they now are payable.

Would Close Loophole.

In its famous gold-clause decisions, the Supreme Court held that no damage had been shown to have been sustained as a result of dollar devaluation, but it left the road open for suits against the Government should anyone be able to prove damages. The proposed legislation would close that loophole.

"There can be no doubt of the constitutionality of the proposed resolution," Cummings said. "This principle of immunity of a sovereignty from suit except on its own consent was reaffirmed recently by the Supreme Court."

He predicted the Government never again would issue bonds containing a gold-payment clause.

Hauptmann Brief Ignored by Wilentz

Supplement to Appeal Held Not to Need Reply.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., July 10.—The State informed the Court of Errors and Appeals today the supplemental brief filed in behalf of Bruno Richard Hauptmann contained nothing needing a reply.

Attorneys for Hauptmann had elaborated in their new brief on the State's "varying theories" as to how the Lindbergh baby was killed. They said Attorney General David T. Wilentz tried the case on the theory the baby died in a fall from the ladder, but in his summation intimated the baby was killed in its crib with a chisel.

The defense said the testimony of Anne Lindbergh refuted one of the State's theories because she testified nothing in the room was disturbed and there were no bloodstains or evidence of haste.

"A reading of the supplemental brief and a re-reading and consideration of the cases," the State's attorney said, "will disclose no argument, no reason, no case, nor any issue not fully considered and discussed in the main brief on behalf of the State of New Jersey."

Revolt Wanes As Power Bills Win in Tests

Senate Sends Death Clause to Conference; House Backs Broader TVA.

Administration amendments to the TVA bill. These would permit the TVA to sell power below cost, weaken the Comptroller General's control over TVA spending, allow the TVA to duplicate existing private transmission lines if it wishes to, and require the TVA to approve all dam construction on the Tennessee River and its tributaries. The House declined, however, to exempt the TVA's proposed $50,000,000 bond issue from taxes, although requested to do so by the Treasury.

Corcoran, New Deal attorney who collaborated in drafting the Wheeler-Rayburn utility holding company bill, will be followed on the Rules Committee witness stand this morning by Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, Interior Department official and intermediary between Corcoran and Representative Brewster.

It was Gruening, Corcoran said, who first introduced him to Brewster, with assurances that the Maine Representative could be counted on to support the President's power policies.

Activities Questioned.

As the House lobby inquiry proceeded, reinforced by a $50,000 expense account, Corcoran was closely pressed by Republican members of the Rules Committee for an explanation of his Capitol activities preceding the utilities bill vote.

Representative Carl E. Mapes (Republican), Michigan, drew from him the admissions that he had prepared three circular letters espousing the death sentence, two of them signed by Representative Rankin, and also supplied material for radio speeches subsequently mimeographed at Federal Power Policy Committee offices.

"How about the President's message?" asked Mapes.

Corcoran smilingly denied he had written it, but said he had furnished some of the information. Likewise he denied that the letters to members were designed to "influence" them, insisting they were merely a "technical" presentation of facts. Representative Frederick R. Lehlbach (Republican), New Jersey, took sharp issue with the latter statement. At least one of the letters, inclosing copies of a speech by Senator William E. Borah, was a "personal appeal," Lehlbach insisted.

Felt Pretty Hot.

Corcoran told the committee Brewster had been on his "neck" continuously about the Passamoquoddy Dam project, and he, Corcoran, felt "pretty hot" when Brewster declined to vote for the holding company "death sentence."

He reiterated that he never had threatened to stop Passamoquoddy construction as a result of Brewster's vote.

"I could not do that," he said; "I had no such power."

Meanwhile, the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, focal point in the lobby inquiry, was freed of a threatening Senate snag, when Senator Dieterich failed to press his motion instructing Senate conferees not to insist on the "death sentence" section.

The withdrawal followed a colloquy between Dieterich, Senator James F Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, and Wheeler. Byrnes again wanted to know if Wheeler had been misquoted in news reports that he would "kill" the utilities bill in conference if it did not carry the "death sentence." Wheeler denied the report.

Vice President Garner immediately named conferees. Skipping over many of the ranking members of the Interstate Commerce Committee, four out of five of those named voted for the "death sentence" in the Senate. They were Senators Wheeler, Barkley, of Kentucky; Brown, of New Hampshire (Democrats), and Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota. The fifth conferee, Senator White (Republican), of Maine, voted against the death sentence.

Gadsden Statement.

This was noted at once in a statement by Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives.

"The appointments to the Senate Conference Committee, as announced today," Gadsden said, "are a further indication of Senator Wheeler's determination to keep the death sentence provisions in the bill, no matter what may be the will of either the people or the people's representatives. Out of five men appointed to the Senate Conference Committee, four are death-sentence advocates.

"Since the proposal in the Senate to modify the death sentence was defeated by a vote of 45 to 44, this 4-to-1 division in the committee is obviously an entirely unfair representation. By selecting conferees of his own opinion and failing to choose them on the usual basis of seniority, Senator Wheeler gave evidence of his determination to force the House Conference Committee, if possible, to bend to his personal desire."

On the other side of the Capitol, recommendations of the House Military Affairs Committee against broad new powers for the Tennessee Valley Authority were thrust rudely aside, as the same House membership which last week bolted the President on his holding company "death-sentence" proposal, now climbed aboard the Administration band wagon.

Representative Lister Hill, of Alabama, a ranking Democrat on the Military Affairs Committee, led the successful liberalizing attack on the TVA bill with a bombardment of Administration amendments that were speedily adopted.

One Hurdle Remains.

One hurdle remained today before the vote on final passage. It was a motion by Representative Walter G. Andrews (Republican), New York, to send the bill back to committee to undo some of the broadening changes approved yesterday.

Under Hill's leadership, the following amendments restoring much of the original rigor to the bill were adopted yesterday:

Provision that TVA power or chemicals need not be sold immediately at cost of production. Vote, 98 to 67.

Loosening of strings on TVA spending, but providing for at least one audit a year by Comptroller General. Vote, 160 to 120.

Authority for the TVA to construct transmission lines, even where private transmission lines, division vote, 130 to 102. Roll call vote, 237 to 145.

Requirement that the TVA approve all dams and related works construction on Tennessee rivers and tributaries in the interest of "unified" Tennessee basin development. Voice vote.

The latter provision, according to Representative Andrew J. May, of Kentucky, is aimed at the Aluminum C... of America which he said already has three dams in the area and is planning another.

"WHY AMERICA PREFERS BUDWEISER"

Even when it's Zero we create

Spring Weather

to make Budweiser uniform

The thermometer is a good brewer's magic wand. By raising temperatures, he can make one kind of beer. By lowering temperatures, he can produce another. The science is to keep the temperatures right. Even though it be ten below outside, the fine barley from which BUDWEISER is brewed must sprout in always uniform Spring Temperature. So an artificial Springtime is created by drawing warm air through an artificial rainstorm to make it April-moist as well as April-warm.

IN whatsoever part of the world you drink BUDWEISER, you'll find it always the same. BUDWEISER's famous bouquet is always sprightly with the fragrance of blended hops. Its full, round flavor tells you always that the cream of America's barley crop has been gathered for this can't-be-copied brew. Every drop twice-fermented, the same sparkle in every bottle. Yes, you can count upon BUDWEISER to set itself vividly apart from plain beers—always, everywhere.

Visitors invited to inspect our plant.

Chairman Kennedy's Protest.

The letter from Chairman Kennedy of the Securities and Exchange Commission to Senator Wheeler, criticizing the House holding company bill, will doubtless be regarded by advocates of the more drastic Senate bill as a blow struck for their cause.

The rare combination of vigor and moderation displayed by Mr. Kennedy in administering the regulatory provisions of the securities act and the securities exchange act have shown that he does not consider regulation to be synonymous with destruction. Consequently his objections to the controversial section 11 of the House bill merit careful consideration. Had it not been for the acrimonious controversy over the so-called "death sentence" penalty of the Senate bill, the defects of the House measure would have received more adequate attention before passage.

Mr. Kennedy's protests are well founded and his letter suggests, although it does not specifically state, how they can be met. He points out that the House bill would force the SEC to decide which holding company systems shall be broken up and which ones may be perpetuated "in the public interest." As there is no attempt to define the "public interest," the bill "furnishes no effective standard to guide the commission." Mr. Kennedy concludes that the administrative burdens would be "just overwhelming."

A second and, in his opinion, even more important ground for protest is furnished by the contemplated delegation of such great discretionary powers to a small group of administrators on matters affecting millions of investors and consumers. If these powers are to be granted, they should be hedged about "with precise and definite standards set by the Congress itself."

Objections also are advanced against section 13 of the House bill. That would compel the SEC to pass upon interservice contracts to determine whether the terms are fair and the profits reasonable, again without providing any objective tests for guidance of the commission. The indefiniteness of the standards established by the bill would, of course, render it especially vulnerable to attack on constitutional grounds as involving an undue delegation of power by Congress.

Criticism of the loose provisions of the bill does not, however, imply that the Senate measure is preferable or under any conditions an acceptable substitute. Chairman Kennedy's protest merely calls attention to the need of writing into the regulatory law specific principles to aid the SEC in deciding when it is in the public interest to dissolve a particular holding company system.

Change For The Worse.

The resignation of Oswald W. Knauth as director of emergency relief activities in New York City follows closely upon the announcement that Gen. Hugh S. Johnson would take charge there for the new Works Progress Administration. Mr. Knauth, a man of tested ability as a business executive, together with his picked aids, who have also resigned, has been engaged in reorganizing the relief administration of the city. The retiring director has been in a position to acquaint himself with the infinitely complex problems that confront relief administrators in New York, and he appears to be admirably equipped to take over the local duties of the new Federal organization. Yet he is to be replaced by Gen. Johnson, who frankly acknowledges that he knows next to nothing about conditions in New York City.

In preparation for spending the millions that will be placed at his disposal, the general is learning about the projects already under way and finding out how the relief agencies of the city function. He objects to the slowness with which the works program has been carried on, but admits that he does not know what obstacles have been encountered in the past by those in charge. Undoubtedly, many reforms in procedure are needed, as inquiry has brought out. But it would seem that further delays will be caused by transferring command to uninformed outsiders, unless they are prepared to go ahead full speed at the risk of serious blunders.

In his new position Gen. Johnson will have less time and inclination to write articles criticizing the outcome of Administration policies which he was instrumental in launching. That may be an advantage of a sort, but it is not a qualification for a job of the type to which he has been assigned. While the Federal Government has properly assumed responsibility for work-relief activities financed with Federal funds, it could and should try to save time and money by enlisting competent local administrators who are already thoroughly familiar with the local field. With few exceptions there is no valid reason for appointing men who are even relatively unacquainted with the especial problems of the communities which they are called upon to serve.

Looking Ahead, Striking Back.

Generous praise for "very splendid work" was expressed to State directors of the Public Works Administration at their conference with the President. "We have given the country useful projects of an enduring value," Mr. Roosevelt said. "We have increased the capital assets of the Nation."

In many respects these compliments are well deserved. The PWA has financed a large number of constructive projects; it has courageously struggled, not always successfully, against political influence in the distribution of works funds, and for the most part its program has been carried out in accord with carefully devised plans. When an objective history of the New Deal is written the PWA will probably rank among its most constructive agencies. The surprising thing is that the President should be lauding the PWA at a time when its experience is being disregarded in favor of a far more casual and unsystematic scheme to create jobs.

When the public works program was inaugurated two years ago Secretary Ickes sought energetically to make jobs for a large army of workmen. He found that if useful work is to be done it must be undertaken slowly with a considerable cash outlay for each man employed. To the credit of PWA it should be said that it went forward with its program in spite of official disappointment over the volume of employment thus provided. Impatient officials then created the CWA as a means of spending money and creating jobs without any necessity for advance planning.

President Roosevelt now praises the accomplishments of PWA, but allots most of the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund to a new venture comparable in many ways to CWA. Less than one-fourth of that sum is to be distributed through Secretary Ickes' organization. Apparently most of the remainder is to go for made work which may or may not be of substantial value to the community in which it is performed.

"There is no reason," the President told the State administrators, "why there should not be a large volume of useful construction under this program." Then he unwittingly cited a major reason why such results will be difficult if not impossible of attainment. "Remember," he admonished the PWA leaders, "that speed is the essence . . . This money was given to us by the Congress to spend during the fiscal year." Even that portion of the fund which is earmarked for PWA may be unwisely spent if the President insists that it must be disbursed within a year regardless of the type of improvements for which borrowing States and municipalities have the greatest need.

Mr. Roosevelt's instructions to the PWA suggest that he does not recognize the difference between financing carefully-planned public works and pouring out $4,000,000,000 in a single year to create temporary jobs. If his remarks are an accurate representation of his views, the prospects for judicious disbursement of this enormous sum are gloomy.

A Long Way From Robin Hood.

A resounding speech by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, is said to have aroused the International Association of Chiefs of Police, in convention at Atlantic City, from apathy to intense interest. Mr. Hoover was candid and realistic. Instead of discoursing upon social and psychological causes of crime, he discussed the sordid business of wiping out "marauders," "vipers" and "human rats." Crime was reduced to its ugly essence—guerrilla warfare against society.

Mr. Hoover's challenge was not confined to actual gunmen, kidnapers and desperadoes. He specifically pledged his organization to the task of ridding American communities of "that filthy parasite of crime—the conniving, plotting, crime-abiding criminal attorney." Through his speech, also, was manifested the indignation of law-enforcement officers against "criminal coddlers," "sob-sisters," crooked politicians who trade opposition to anticrime statutes for the votes of the underworld, and all other "enemies of society" who aid the criminal.

Words alone will not solve the crime problem. Mr. Hoover's address is significant chiefly because it gives evidence of an aggressive attitude where too often there is lack of interest and inactivity. Mr. Hoover is not willing to follow the traditional methods which result in law enforcement lagging a considerable distance behind the criminal. He has introduced systematic and relentless pursuit for haphazard detection methods. With remarkable results, his men have met the underworld on its own ground. They have taken the offensive at a time when organized crime has become an actual menace to civilization.

More than any law enforcement officer in the country, Mr. Hoover has challenged the popular conception of the criminal as a romantic even though depraved figure. In the Bureau of Investigation there is no attempt to magnify the prowess of racketeers in order to reflect distinction upon the men who cope with them. To Mr. Hoover they are "scum" and "vermin," to be exterminated like other menaces to society. From the sociological viewpoint this may be a harsh attitude, but it is probably a healthy reaction from an overdose of Robin Hood sentimentality.

A school for officers from all parts of the country will open in Washington this month under the direction of the G-Men. If it should accomplish nothing more than the inculcation of Mr. Hoover's aggressive spirit into future public defenders, a significant contribution to law enforcement will be made.

Another Chapter In Silver.

In a recent discussion of the prospects for stabilization of the pound-dollar rate, the London Economist said that "bankers and others who have watched with alarm America's light-hearted but highly pernicious escapade regarding silver, ask themselves whether we should do right to place our currency in a position where it might be dominated by so irresponsible a country."

Probably these harsh British critics will become even more confirmed skeptics when they observe the havoc created in the speculative silver market by the recent slowing up of the silver-buying policy. In the belief that the Treasury, goaded by the Senate silver bloc, would lift the price of the metal to $1.29 per ounce within a short time, an active bull market in silver developed. For a time prices advanced at an extraordinarily rapid rate, with serious consequences to China and with accompanying annoyance to silver-using countries in which subsidiary coinage began to be hoarded.

It was evident that the price rise was artificial and would have to be supported by continuous buying if a reactionary downward movement were to be avoided. Consequently, when the Treasury took a holiday from "boosting the price of silver," the speculators found themselves in possession of large supplies for which there was little demand. Moreover, they became increasingly nervous concerning the outlook for the immediate future. Instead of speculating in silver, they were in fact forced to gamble on the uncertain chances of a resumption of active silver buying by the United States Treasury.

The unsound market position created by our indefensible monetary experiments has resulted in concerted efforts to unload speculative silver holdings upon a market which had few buyers. To prevent a drastic collapse in prices, the Treasury has responded to appeals from London and is reported to have bought possibly as much as 50,000,000 ounces of silver within the period of three days.

This heavy purchasing in turn is believed to be responsible for a concurrent rise in the exchange value of pounds in terms of dollars, since the Treasury stabilization fund obtained pounds with which to make the silver purchases. The advance in sterling has not been welcomed by the British, and a subsequent decline in the rate is attributed to the activities of the British equalization fund.

With silver selling for less than 70 cents per ounce in the London market, the goal of $1.29 is still far away. Until it is reached, however, or the ill-advised buying program abandoned, the silver market will no doubt go through recurrent crises, with unsettling effects upon the dollar and the pound. Under the circumstances, the British can hardly be blamed for doubting the sincerity of our professed desire for a return to a regime of stabilized international currencies.

A Smoke Screen?

Charges of misfeasance are certainly a thankless reward for a conscientious official who has spent months of his time working out a statute to protect families of small means from the loan sharks. Yet that is precisely the position into which Representative Jenckes has placed Corporation Counsel Prettyman.

If Mrs. Jenckes is familiar with the District small-loans statute, she must realize that it has never been enforced. For many years the law has been a dead letter because of its drastic provisions on one hand and its loopholes on the other. If Mr. Prettyman had used all the resources of his office to enforce the act, the best he could have done would have been to drive the small-loan companies operating here into Virginia or Maryland, where they may legally charge interest as high as 42 per cent. Obviously nothing would have been gained by such an attempt to apply an impractical statute.

In spite of the shortcomings of the law, Mr. Prettyman has manifested his determination to attempt enforcement of it. Before waging a crusade upon legitimate lending companies, however, he sought to have the law amended to workable form. His bill is before Congress. While permitting interest rates high enough to keep capital in this field, it would save thousands of dollars per year for families that are forced by emergency to borrow without security. In the circumstances Mrs. Jenckes' charge appears to be a smoke screen to divert attention from this important measure.

If Congress fails to act, the law will be enforced so far as that is possible. But what will be gained by driving Washington residents to nearby suburbs for loans at exorbitant interest rates? The only constructive course is enactment of the small-loans bill so that the District may retain control of the situation and lighten the burden either legally or illegally imposed upon citizens in desperate circumstances.

A physician advised a patient who owed him a past due account to sleep with the windows open, and next morning the patient's pocketbook and $30 were missing. Men have been hanged on circumstantial evidence less convincing.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

This Topsy-Turvy Age.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: One-half the American people work themselves to death. The other half don't work at all. There's a saying, "It's a poor family that can't support one gentleman." It's consoling to think that we have so many gentlemen that half the population are working in double shifts trying to support them in a style to which they have not been accustomed.

In our topsy-turvy age ministers deny God; women rule men; children dictate to parents; criminals are coddled; servants rebel against masters; attempts are made to limit and prevent the procreation of children; mediocrity is rewarded, while talent is neglected or ignored; beggars ride on horseback (in automobiles), and men are encouraged to live without working.

"Shall I not visit for these things? saith the Lord: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this?"

Veteran Votes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please print this letter in your paper for United States veterans. In answer to the nine World War veterans, let me say that you are not the only ones who think Mr. Roosevelt will be defeated in 1936.

And he should be defeated. I think it is a shame the way he has treated us veterans. All veterans voted for Roosevelt, but they will not next time. VETERAN.

Only Proper?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt, to whom any talk-back from utility investors is as maddening as a red flag to a bull, assails their defensive stand against the death sentence as "propaganda." But his own propaganda against them, of which the like has never been known in this country in prejudice, bitterness and unfairness, perhaps seems to him only proper gander.

"Discreet" Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to the recent reported pronouncement of Judge Aldrich, of White Plains, N. Y., from the bench that "discreet" adultery is negligible, if "not flaunted in the face of the injured victim." What an outrage on common sense! Is the unscrupulous criminal hereafter justified in his crime provided he is shrewd and "discreet" enough to get away with it?

How the underworld must rejoice at this wholesale alibi from the very seat of justice itself. How the gods must laugh at Puck's sardonic comment, "What fools these mortals be!" Political corruption and "scraps of paper," etc., are bad enough, but are we to lose the decent home, the nearest place to Heaven on this side of eternity? Even Russia has awakened and is hastily trying to resurrect the homes they scrapped in wrecking centuries of slow growth for their New Deal. Let us wake up to our danger before we lose all self-control and self-respect.

And what of the moral side, perjury and dishonesty in breaking sacred pledges; treachery to one who trusts; cowardice, defrauding the helpless, etc.? Has the public conscience really degenerated to such depths as this weird decision indicates? Are we only one jump ahead of the "beasts that perish," in that we are intelligent enough to be legally "discreet" in our civilized vileness?

Politics Vs. Patriotism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What a pitiful waste of effort is represented by the recurring "open letters to the President" and editorials and articles in the same vein, all trying to show Mr. Roosevelt how imminent recovery is and how easy it would be for him to hasten its return. Were the writers of these appeals sufficiently practical, they would see clearly that the President apparently is not interested in the welfare of the American people — the forgotten men.

It is evident that Mr. Roosevelt is interested primarily in one thing—himself—in his fancied infallibility as a ruler and perpetuating himself in power through his reelection.

The proofs are at hand: (1) Mr. Roosevelt is urging the passage of legislation generally conceded to be unconstitutional when its enactment will serve to delay recovery and work additional hardships on many citizens. But much of it would tend to increase his own power. (2) He apparently is trying to build up a case that will help him to secure changes in the Constitution which will enhance his power over the country. (3) He countenances the use of the $4,800,000,000 in ways that may aid his reelection. (4) He continues to support the destructively uneconomic but regimenting programs of the AAA. (5) He fails to make any of the simple moves that obviously would lead to restoring confidence to the Nation and hence speed up recovery. (6) He continues to play politics when patriotism of a high order is needed.

Since it is useless to expect constructive help from the leader of the New Deal, the sensible move for all patriotic citizens, irrespective of party, is militantly to bend every effort to save the country by ousting the New Deal in 1936.

STANLEY F. MORSE.
Chicago, July 8.

Who Is He?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is generally known that more than one pseudo-Republican is seeking the Republican nomination for President in 1936. Among the number are some who have opposed both the Republican Party and its policies under the pretense that their own ideas of government were preferable, thereby giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

Loyal Republicans, the country over, want as their candidate for the Presidency one whose record shows that at all times he has been true both to his party and to American principles of government. They want none other. There are several, eminent in public life who can meet this standard, and who are not using the columns of newspapers for publicity.

The Republican nominee, besides being a loyal Republican and true American, should be an attractive speaker, not too far advanced in age, and living in the Middle West. With such a candidate, the party can enter the campaign with confidence and with a flattering prospect of success. VOTER.

Safety On The Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having listened in regularly to the "Postilion" in his Sunday evening talks, as well as on week day news bulletins, I am in full sympathy with The Post in the campaign it has been waging to attain safety for the pedestrian in crossing city streets, as also in an effort to reduce the frightful toll in motor accidents generally.

Leprosy Bill Perturbs Filipinos.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The other day the Quezon-controlled Philippine Legislature enacted a bill which virtually destroyed the leprosy segregation service. The measure provides that lepers showing bacteriologically negative tests for four consecutive weeks shall be immediately released from detention hospitals, and that cases adjudged mild, incipient or noncontagious shall be confined or treated privately at the discretion of various boards. It is believed that the bill is prompted by a movement to provide more cases for private physicians.

It seems to me that this action of the Filipino leaders is a backward step in the scientific progress which the islands have accomplished in the past 36 years; it will shock the whole civilized world and make the Philippines a grandiloquent example of a country run by narrow-minded and stupid politicians. I feel confident, however, that the humanitarian and able American Governor General of those islands will refuse to indorse such ill-conceived and unprogressive legislation.

If the enactment of this law is possible—a measure plainly designed for the benefit of politicians at the expense of the struggling masses—even while the Philippines is still under the watchful and parental eye of the United States, we can truly expect laws more or less of the same nature and scope to be foisted upon a suffering and helpless people when ruthless and unprincipled politicians have control of the country under an independent government. That government, best described by Diderot, in one of his famous plays, as one which functions for the good of the community and the advantage of the individual, seems to be the least concern of Filipino leaders.

We, the Filipino people, will rue the day when our political leaders will have realized their dreams of national independence. Independence of American control can and will mean only one thing: a change of masters from the benign American influence of the New World democracy to that of the Filipino political oligarchies drunk with power. But I predict that such a condition of affairs will not last long. Once the treachery of the politicians has been exposed and understood by the inarticulate masses, a revolt, under the inspiration of the militant youth movement of the Philippines, will be necessary in order to save the Philippines from all those vices which misery, luxury and poverty produce. The modern Filipino youth will protest against the foolish laws until they are reformed. For not until then will they, their children and their children's children enjoy true freedom and drink deep of the fountain spring of democracy.

The future of every age belongs to those who can see farther than their fellows and who fight their way toward the vision that they see; but the risks are equally great under any condition of society, and some sort of Bastilles or Vincennes is always imminent. We, the youths of the Philippines, brought up in the ideals of American civilization and virile democracy, are certainly the most fitted of all Filipinos to organize and uphold the great task of establishing a Philippine democracy and to carry it to triumphal completion.

Liberty And Laws

LONG before he made his first down payment, Eph told me that he was thinking of buying a misused car; and I am now satisfied that that is the kind he got.

"They's some mule in it," says Eph. "It done stop on the State road an' won' go again an' the State cop he come up an' say, 'Wha' is ye' drivah's license?' An' I say, 'Home.' An' he say, "Huh." an' then he laugh an' say, 'You go home an' stay wiv it or I pinch you.' He ack as if he don' believe I got no license nohow."

"And have you?" I demanded.

"No, I hasn't," he confessed, "but I'se not on the State road much an' the cop's not wha' I is." And that, as Eph sees it, makes it all right.

Once in a great while Eph gets a hunter's license, but he has been known to break the game laws. He'll confess as much to anybody but a game warden. During prohibition days he could always get a little bootleg liquor for a friend. He regularly plays the "numbers" and hopes some day to win something.

• • • •

All of which shows that Eph has a record as a lawbreaker. And yet, having recited his misdeeds, I like and respect him. He may not be an ideal citizen, but he is fairly average. And I put it to his credit that he has never been known to complain of the Government restricting his liberty.

Liberty! Death came to Patrick Henry. Liberty he never knew. No civilized man knows it. Customs, conventions, self-interest bind him. The best the highest civilization affords is the right of a man to choose his own style of chains; and even there his choice is limited.

The nearest thing to true liberty is the playful impulse of the thoughtless child; and that's liberty on sufferance. With every rule of the game of life a child is forced to learn, he loses some shred of freedom; and is the better for it. "Say, mom, do you know Willie Jones' neck? Well, his mother made him go back and wash it." With such harshness are the rules enforced!

• • • •

It is curious to note in the history of a self-styled law-abiding people that one of our chief claims to greatness lies in the cheerfulness with which we have broken laws we could not abide; and the paradox is given justification by the eager celerity with which we have enacted other laws to take their places.

Let us begin near home, in Maryland. There is no record of the meeting of Maryland's first Assembly. The acts of the second in 1637 were repudiated by Lord Baltimore because by virtue of his charter he had the right to initiate all legislation, the power of the Assembly being limited to assent or dissent. This was the law beyond peradventure.

But the freemen of Maryland, putting their faith in an older charter, that of Runnymede, blithely killed the whole body of bills proposed by the Proprietary. That they straightway passed other bills almost identical with those proposed by his lordship is beside the point. They stood for a principle. And Cecil, second Lord Baltimore, having more wisdom than the English King (and the King's father before him) passively acquiesced.

The Assembly "got away with it" and the members were consequently patriots. If they had failed they would have been rebels and malefactors.

• • • •

There were rebels and malefactors aplenty in the days that followed. England's tariff and navigation acts brought forth a great many of them. Not inappropriately Maryland's first bootleg articles were woolen stockings. There was a time when a loom could be as contraband as a still. And it was following the breaking of some obnoxious laws that in 1776 an important declaration was made that left its impress on the history of the entire world.

But it was not always a "foreign tyrant" that outraged the people. "An Act Touching Hoggs and the Marking of Cattell" passed in 1649 by the Assembly was ignored and flouted for a generation.

Even today in an era of AAA process taxes we have "hot pork"—and I don't mean barbecue.

From all of which we may conclude:

First—That not all lawbreakers are criminally minded. They may be cursed by ignorance or blessed by high-mindedness; dominated by pure cussedness or pure patriotism. Eph is a kindly illiterate who can drive a car but can't answer the questions in the book of motor regulations. He has my sympathy but I am not altogether sorry that his fear of the law will keep him on the back roads. His other lapses leave me cold.

Second—If a sufficient number of people are sufficiently interested they can nullify any law ever written. It is to be regretted that the protest is invariably emotional rather than intellectual and that the proper steps to bring about a desired change are seldom taken. The comforting thing is that the laws thus nullified usually, if not always, deserve their fate.

Going Too Far

FOR the psychologists, the interesting thing about the Brewster-Corcoran controversy should be the point at which the Maine Congressman squealed when the Liberal group applied the screws to him. In the early days of the electric chair there was considerable discussion about the amount of juice necessary to effect quick death without at the same time tearing the body to pieces. As the authorities have finally gotten it down, the body makes one heroic resistance and instantly falls limp against the restraining straps.

Those who observed the public execution of Brewster were amazed at the torture he could take before showing the pain. The spark had to be applied to nearly 50 different places on his body before the vulnerable spot was reached. It proves indisputably that while men are outwardly alike there is a vast difference in their individual compositions.

• • • •

One recalls the time Arthur Robinson oratorically went after the peerless Jim Reed. He called him just about everything he could within the bounds of Senate rules, but not once did Jim wince or did his face turn red. In conclusion, Arthur, as if to take some of the sting from his remarks, said: "But we all respect the venerable gentleman from Missouri." At the word "venerable" Jim hit the ceiling. In his characteristic Reed retort that was the only statement that seemed to rile him. He took not the slightest exception to anything else Arthur had said.

A large crowd had turned out to watch the execution of Brewster. The impression is that it was right popular among both the Republicans and the Democrats. The Republicans have as about as much regard for him as they do for those so-called Progressives in their ranks. In fact, they have more for the Progressives because they can at least put their fingers on them. They never know where Brewster is.

And that Brewster was in for an execution before the House Rules Committee everybody knew. Always quite slick in the business of politics he thought his expose of Corcoran's pressure upon him to vote for the "death" clause in the utilities bill was a masterstroke. He figured that with this expose the Administration would have to go through with the Passamaquoddy tide-harnessing project.

• • • •

But what the gentleman didn't consider was the manner in which the liberals would rally around Corcoran to do a good job on him. Even Ferdinand Pecora, now a judge and supposed to be out of the controversy, came running down when the word went out that Tommy Corcoran was in a jam. Tommy was coached for three days by the best brains in the liberal group and Tommy's no mental slouch himself. The result is that while the hearing gave the country an amazing picture of what is going on here it painted a distressful picture, particularly of Brewster.

It revealed him as a man who had campaigned against the utilities all of his public life and who even worked hard to get the Passamaquoddy project for his State, which is certainly designed to kill off the power companies and put the State in the power business, yet he voted against the "death" clause because of utility interests in his district.

But during none of the recital or development of this picture did Brewster show the slightest emotion or the slightest hurt. As Corcoran recited that Brewster had switched just a week or so before the vote and had discussed frankly his political reasons for doing so the spectators looked at Brewster and there was not a sign that he was moved at all.

• • • •

All over his body did Corcoran apply the spark and not once did he squirm. The impression is that he was almost ready to call it quits until he could get new instructions from his liberal conferees when he suddenly related that Brewster had expressed a willingness to absent himself on the vote. That struck the vulnerable spot. It was as Brewster exclaimed, calling Corcoran a "liar," going too far. If that doesn't present a psychological study I'll eat my hat.

Going back over all the discrediting statements Corcoran made this is easily the mildest one. Yet it was the one which struck. It was the one which got through Brewster's outer shell and to his quick. This is what made him squeal.

The inescapable conclusion is that he doesn't care what you say about him, except that he will dodge a vote. This is a matter of pride. He always votes—and all over the place.

A Filipino Richelieu

Bishop Aglipay, Associate Of Aguinaldo In Early Days Of Spanish Rebellion, Announces His Candidacy For Presidency Of New Commonwealth In Forthcoming Elections.

By Vicente Albano Pacis.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Manila (By Mail).

BISHOP GREGORIO AGLIPAY, supreme head of the church he founded during the Philippine revolution against Spain, capitalizing the deep-seated Filipino hatred of the politics-meddling friars, would go Richelieu one better. Instead of wielding political power under the guise of his bishop's robe, he would govern the Philippines directly from Malacanang palace as president of the commonwealth. He has just announced that he is a candidate for the position.

Bishop Aglipay, like Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo and Senate President Quezon, against whom he is running for president, is one of the most glamorous figures in contemporary Philippine history. He has long been regarded a sort of political boss in certain sections of the country, making and unmaking senators, representatives and provincial governors. He is a picturesque combination of a priest, a rebel in both the religious and the political sense, and a politician. It is obvious that the coming inauguration of the commonwealth has influenced him to concentrate on politics until the people repudiate him. Although he is not likely to win the election, he is regarded a stronger candidate than Gen. Aguinaldo.

Aglipay was educated for the Catholic priesthood and was ordained as such about 1875, when Spain was still the undisputed sovereign in the islands. Under Spain, unlike under America, the Filipinos had very little to say religiously, politically and socially. In the religious hierarchy, as in the political and social worlds, they remained in the bottom. Mediocrity was their greatest protection, merit and initiative almost invariably bringing them to grief.

The revolution against Spain was therefore truly a revolution in the social, political and religious sense. And Aglipay headed its religious phase, while Aguinaldo its political and social aspects. At the start, he enlisted under Aguinaldo but, paradoxically, the reform Aglipay achieved—the movement he led—has been more lastingly successful than any Aguinaldo can boast.

• • • •

THE revolution found Aglipay in the ranks of the rebels; instead of his habit, he had on a colonel's uniform. Many are the stories, some of them undoubtedly mythical, told even today of his bravery in action. One of the most fantastic is to the effect that he was bullet-proof and that he could catch enemy bullets as one would baseballs to be used in the rebel guns.

At any rate, when Aguinaldo founded his "Malolos Republic" shortly after the arrival of the American forces, Aglipay also founded the "Philippine Independent Church." And as Aguinaldo elected himself "president," Aglipay proclaimed himself "bishop." He could not quite adopt the title of Pope since independence of the papacy and of the various religious orders that had farmed out the Philippines was the substance of his revolt.

As a religious movement, that of Aglipay was largely Xenophonic and superficial. He adopted every Catholic rite and every Catholic dogma; his reform, all told, consisted of his replacing the Pope and the various religious orders at the head. In later years, however, he has injected further "native appeal" and infused vague scientific admissions into his religion. At the beginning, as Aglipay seized the Spanish Catholic churches and convents with all their equipment, he was quite content with using the same images the friars had used. Later on, however, when the Catholic Church finally regained these properties and Aglipay was forced consequently to build his own churches and acquire his own images, he ordered that these new images be of the brown race and their garments of Filipino fabrics and cut. In some instances, he canonized Filipino revolutionary heroes and martyrs.

• • • •

ONE of the favorite theories of Bishop Aglipay, showing a vague submission to scientific facts, is embodied in the following remark he made recently for the writer's personal benefit: "In the Catholic Bible it is said that when a blind soldier pierced Jesus Christ with his weapon, Jesus' blood spurted out, sprinkling and curing his blind eye. But, my dear sir, Jesus Christ had been dead for more than 24 hours; there could have been no live blood in his body at all!

But, with all these crudities, Aglipay has kept his organization intact. In some sections of the country, especially in the northern Luzon provinces, of which he is a native, his followers have a plurality over the followers of other religions. In this region, the candidate for political office publicly indorsed by Aglipay is often elected. This, together with the fact that he has religious followers of varying formidableness in every town in the country, has nerved him to throw his bishop's miter into the ring.

There seems to be no doubt at all that neither Aglipay nor Aguinaldo will get to first base. Quezon, every unbiased political observer concedes, will be elected overwhelmingly as first president of the Philippine commonwealth. Insofar as Aglipay is concerned, it is pointed out, the main significance of his open meddling in politics consists in his completely reversing himself. The religious revolt against the Spanish friars was motivated mainly by their political meddling and abuses made possible by the practical union of church and state in the Spanish scheme. Now, it is pointed out, Aglipay seeks to revive both. His church, founded as it is on flimsy religious dogmas, may suffer a fatal setback. In the political knock-down-and-drag-out show, his followers are bound to learn the worst.

Meanwhile, it is predicted that Aglipay's being in the presidential race will weaken Aguinaldo considerably. Each, of course, has to rely on "rebel elements" for political support. Consequently, the gain of one is the loss of the other. As a matter of fact, in announcing his candidacy, Aglipay declared: "I have had every intention of supporting Gen. Aguinaldo's candidacy, but 'my own people' insist that I run myself. I can no longer put off their demand."

Browning In Chinese

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

MY nephew, Dr. Dryden L. Phelps, is a professor of English literature, in the College of Illuminated Virtue, west China University, Chengtu, Szechuan, west China. It is situated 3,000 miles inland, north of Afghanistan.

He has learned Chinese, lectures in that language, and is, I believe, the first person to have published a volume of Browning's poems in his own Chinese translation, where, the irreverent may say, they are easier to read than in the original.

• • • •

The Chinese students there are eager to learn English, and, as an illustration of their proficiency, they recently played Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Gondoliers," with full scenery, costumes and music, followed a few weeks later by a performance of Barrie's "Dear Brutus."

I make no apology for quoting a letter from my nephew, as the information he gives should be of general literary interest.

"At the university Sunday evening service, Bishop C. T. Song recited in magnificent Chinese Browning's poem, 'The Grammarian's Funeral.' His student audience was fascinated. The effect was tremendous. That is the most concise, effective sermon we have had in many a month. The bishop and I have been reading Shakespeare, Tennyson and Browning, Chinese history, philosophy and poetry together for ten years. We are now in the middle of 'The Ring and the Book.' Bishop Song is giving a course in Browning at the university, and writing a brief Chinese commentary on the poems."

• • • •

"I inclose a copy of a new hymn translated into Chinese by the poet and teacher at Yenching University at Peiping, C. T. Chao," the letter continues. "It is in their new Yenching hymn book. It is the first Browning poem to be made into a Chinese hymn. The words are from 'Rabbi Ben Ezra.' Then Welcome Each Rebuff! and the tune is from a German song of the seventeenth century.

"I teach a course in English poetry. Two of the examination questions were: 'What was the historical incident behind the poem, "A Ballad of Trees and the Master?" What is the meaning of this poem?' One answer was, 'Jesus, when He was betrayed by His disciple Juda. He knew He must be put to death, and did not fear at all. But He loved people, came to a garden near the brook Cedron to pray for them. Where He was founded. Jesus, though He was crossed, died with love. People were not good and kind as trees, for the latter knew the Lord, and received Him with a smile, when He was there.'"

Coroner Gives Sutton Death Theory to Jury

Staunton Murder Trial Witness Lays Tragedy to 'Air Embolism.'

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., July 10.—Expression of an opinion that "air embolism" might have caused the death of Mrs. Frances Stanley Sutton, 19-year-old expectant mother, on May 22, was given in court today by Dr. T. M. Parkins, coroner, at the trial of George W. Clark on a murder charge.

At a preliminary hearing, the coroner said he found no evidence of what caused Mrs. Sutton's death, but today said he had come to the conclusion that air introduced into the bloodstream caused a heart collapse.

A closely guarded report of an analysis made by a State chemist of the contents of the woman's stomach, given to the jury today by Dr. Parkins, declared no poisonous matter was found.

Police Chief W. P. Davis testified Clark told him after the latter's arrest that he rented a room and provided a surgical instrument for Mrs. Sutton but declared that was his only connection with the affair.

Davis quoted Clark as saying that when he returned to the room Mrs. Sutton was sinking rapidly into unconsciousness. He picked her up to take her home, Clark was said to have stated, but realized he did not know where she lived and then took her to a hospital. She was dead when she arrived.

The Commonwealth had not completed its case when court adjourned at 5 p. m.

Considerable delay was experienced in obtaining a jury, a majority of those called admitting they had formed an opinion in the case. A second venire was necessary to complete the jury.

Man Tries Suicide Twice in Jail Cell

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 10.—William Long, 41, who told police he was from Abel, Md., was in jail here today following his arrest late last night after he became ill in the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad station.

Shortly after he was locked up, Long was said to have stripped a length of mattress covering from his cell cot, tied an end around his neck and the other on the bars of the cell. Climbing up the bars, he jumped, but his feet reached the floor before the improvised rope became taut, police said. Uninjured, police said he then set fire to the mattress, but only succeeded in singeing his clothes before officers intervened.

Dave Barry Refused Vacation of Sentence

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Dave Barry, former fight referee under a one-year jail sentence on an embezzlement charge, today was denied a vacation of sentence by Judge Michael Beinberg, but was given a stay until August 15 to prepare for an appellate court appeal.

In support of the motion to vacate the sentence, counsel for Barry offered two affidavits setting forth that Joseph Baiata, alleged ringleader in a plot to embezzle funds from the Amalgamated Trust & Savings Bank, said Barry did not know he was involved in a criminal action.

Baiata pleaded guilty and was sent to prison for a one to ten-year term.

Greece Plans Vote On Rule by King

Plebescite Upon Return to Monarchy Due.

By the United Press.

Athens, July 10.—The National Assembly, by a vote of 188 to 49, tonight authorized the government to conduct a plebiscite to determine whether monarchy is to be restored in Greece.

The government was authorized also to maintain the republic until November 15. It may determine what percentage above 50 per cent of the plebiscite vote is necessary to restore former King George to his throne.

During debate a minority held a bare majority of votes should be sufficient to restore the monarchy, but Premier Panagiotis Tsalardis insisted the government should fix the percentage over 50 per cent 40 days before the plebiscite.

PWA Adviser, Carroll Board Meet on Funds

Federal Aid on Proposed Projects in County Discussed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., July 10.—Carroll County commissioners and William J. Hungerford, Maryland Public Works adviser, discussed plans here today for obtaining Federal funds to finance a number of proposed projects in the county.

The first project contemplated by the county commissioners is the construction of a high school building here. Erection of a medical center and combating of soil erosion also are included among the PWA projects discussed. It was pointed out the county must assume 55 per cent of the cost under the PWA program and that funds are available under a recent act of the Legislature which gives the Carroll County commissioners power to borrow $200,000 for emergency purposes.

The $200,000 could be borrowed this year, it was stated, and included as part of next year's budget. Although definite figures on the cost of the proposed projects have not been announced, it was revealed preliminary plans call for an outlay of $105,000 for the high school and $75,000 for a hospital.

The county commissioners, who asserted formal application for Federal funds probably will be made within a month, announced they will meet with the acting Carroll County Children's Aid Society Welfare Board tomorrow, when a permanent board will be named and plans for the medical center discussed.

Members of the acting welfare board who probably will be appointed are the Rev. Lewis H. Brumbaugh, Westminster, chairman; Dr. G. Lewis Wetzel, Union Mills; John Bushey, Woodbine; Paul Kuhns, county treasurer; George N. Fringer, State's attorney; Mrs. J. Edgar Myers, Westminster; and Ira Watkins, Mount Airy.

"Mama," whispered little Willie as the great conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and the famous soprano began her aria, "what's the man shaking the stick at her for?"

"Shut up!" Mama explained. "That's his baton. He isn't shaking it at her."

"Then what's she hollerin' for?"

That, we are sad to report, is little Willie's reaction to good music. The case of his sister is even worse. She just loves to prattle about how much she adores good music, but when she has an opportunity to listen to a great symphony she stays home and tunes the radio to Cab Calloway's band. She thinks that arpeggio is an island in the Pacific and that Chaikovski was a Russian general. You see, little Willie and his sister have not read the excellent articles by Ray C. B. Brown in The Washington Post; and, therefore, are not en rapport with things musical. But there is hope for them even now, and we are starting a subscription to The Post for them in order that they may learn the intellectual pleasure to be derived from listening to classical music.

Mr. Brown is one of America's best known music critics, and his authoritative, intelligent, sensitive articles are required reading for music lovers. Washington is becoming more and more music conscious, and The Post is proud of the part Mr. Brown has played in explaining the works of great composers to new listeners. For two years he was managing editor of Musical America and his writings are studied closely by students. In his "Postlude" column, discussing the programs presented by symphony orchestras, choral groups and others, he strikes a new note in criticism.

Like his good friend, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the "tune detector," Mr. Brown can listen to Tin Pan Alley's latest song hit and tell you instantly the symphony from which the theme was stolen, and, if you question him closely, he might remember the older work from which the symphony composer borrowed a few bars!

In The Sunday Post you'll find an entire page devoted to music, and the leading article, always written by Mr. Brown, will give you a deeper, more sympathetic understanding of all things musical. Nowadays, when Stravinski's "Firebird" suite is discussed at the dinner table along with the New Deal and Europe's war scare, you'll find Ray C. B. Brown's brilliant articles of great help in convincing your hostess that you, too, can recognize Bloch's "Schelomo" and that you can discuss Hindemith with the best of them. If you are a lover of good music you'll appreciate his clear, authentic criticisms; if you are just learning to listen to the great symphonies you'll demand his help. You'll find it in

Carne Citizens Press for Sidewalks Near All Schools.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

The Carne Precinct Citizens Association meeting in the St. Mary's Episcopal Church at Livingston Heights adopted a program of objectives to be sought in the near future.

Included is the acquiring of old Fort Ethan Allen by the County for park purposes, the laying of sidewalks near schools, the establishment of a kindergarten at John Marshall School and the repairing of Glebe road.

Old Fort Ethan Allen, at the intersection of Military and Glebe roads, was one of the last bulwarks of protection of the Capital during the War Between the States. The site contains about 6 acres and is privately owned. Under the proposal of the association the county will purchase the property and develop it as a memorial park.

The second propsal of the association is to have the county lay sidewalks at each school for 1 mile in each direction. It was held that children living within that distance walk to school and require the protection afforded by sidewalks.

The plan to establish a kindergarten at the John Marshall School will be taken up by the organization's educational committee with the county school board.

The association plans to push the repair of Glebe road especially at the intersection of the Lee Highway where the shoulders have worn far below the surface of the ground.

The regular meeting of the department presidents and department chiefs of Arlington County fire companies and members of the Arlington-Fairfax Firemen's Association field day committee will be held tonight at 8 p. m., in the Jefferson District Firehouse at Virginia Highlands.

Plans will be made for the annual field day at the Jefferson Firehouse on August 24.

The Arlington County Rotary Club will hold its weekly luncheon meeting this afternoon at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

The Clarendon Business Men's Association will meet tonight at 8 p. m. in the Clever Building at Clarendon.

A jury in the Circuit Court of Arlington County yesterday rendered a verdict in favor of three residents of Cherrydale, Va., and awarded damages totaling $1,500 for injuries received in an automobile accident. The jury found Ralph E. Lawson, of Baltimore, a motorist, responsible for the crash. The driver of a truck involved in the three-car crash was exonerated.

Margaret Yates, 19, was awarded $200; her sister, Ina, 17, $300, and Josephine Mason, a friend, who was a passenger in the Yates car, $1,000.

Bridges Hit in Vote Of Longshoremen

Green Attacks 'Radicals' in Pacific Coast Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—The left wing movement in the International Longshoremen's Association suffered a sharp setback today in the first test of strength between the conservative administration of Joseph P. Ryan, president, and the San Francisco delegation headed by Harry Bridges, fiery coast leader.

To cheers and shouting, the association's quadrennial convention approved a motion "indorsing" Ryan's activities in settling the Pacific Coast strike of last year. Bridges, seeking Ryan's ouster, was the only delegate to record his vote in opposition. Today's action strongly forecast Ryan's reelection as president at tomorrow's election of officers.

Indorsement of Ryan's strike activities, termed to be "to the best interest of all longshoremen," followed a sharp attack by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, on alleged communistic elements attempting to gain a foothold in the organized labor movement.

Anti-Small Gaming Rule Halts Montgomery Annual Carnivals

Churches, Clubs Protest Regulation Against Concessions.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

While two Silver Spring restaurant keepers were posting bond for alleged violation of the county gambling laws, church, fraternal and volunteer fire department committees were debating on the anti-small-gambling ruling of State's Attorney James H. Pugh. The committee in charge of the Masonic carnival at Silver Spring, scheduled to begin tonight, decreed indefinite postponement of the affair until the situation is clarified. The carnival committee felt that the loss of the paddle wheel and bingo concessions would spell loss for the carnival.

Silver Spring volunteer firemen will meet Monday night to decide whether to open their annual carnival July 31 and the committee in charge of the St. Michael's Catholic Church garden party was considering possibility of postponing the party.

The lawn fete for St. Martin's Catholic Church in Gaithersburg, which is scheduled for July 24 and 25, will continue, but chance wheels, bingo and candy paddles will not be part of the attractions. The church in the past has realized considerable sums from these stands.

H. C. Kleinstuber, chairman of the committee in charge of the carnival for Our Lady of Sorrows Catholic Church, Takoma Park, said he believed the carnival would go ahead with its scheduled candy wheels, but probably would not have bingo games.

Other church groups and organizations are faced with the same situation. The office of State's Attorney Pugh and the various police stations received a steady stream of telephone calls protesting the order yesterday.

Maynard L. Hawkins, proprietor of the Sandwich Shop, Kensington, and T. A. Waldron, proprietor of the Dixie Pig Barbecue in Silver Spring, were arrested yesterday on charges of possessing gambling paraphernalia. Hawkins had deposited $100 collateral at the Silver Spring police substation last night and Waldron was expected to post collateral later in the night.

Meanwhile some 50 merchants in the county have been warned to discontinue operation of claw machines, ball machines and other alleged gambling games where a prize is awarded for scores on the machines. The machines are legal if the patron receives no prize or other compensation.

The Montgomery County Board of Education approved a report of the special committee appointed to consider the request of the residents of Kensington for a junior high school. The committee recommended that owners of land needed for the necessary improvement be contacted in order that options could be obtained on the land until such time as funds can be authorized by the Legislature for purchase of the land.

The board considered at length plans for obtaining an early start on necessary school programs which are being held up by the delay of the PWA in acting on the school board's application for a grant.

The Montgomery County Jersey Calf Club will meet tonight at the home of Mrs. George A. Ninas, Gaithersburg, Md. Albert A. Ady, assistant county agent, will give an illustrated lecture on dairy cattle judging, and a schedule of judging tours will be arranged. These tours will begin next week and will be in preparation for the annual judging contest at the Maryland State Fair and Timonium.

The Olney Grange at its meeting last night appropriated funds to take care of the expenses of two 4-H Club members, a boy and a girl, at club week at the University of Maryland, August 8 to 13. These club members are to be selected by the officers of the grange, from the Olney-Sandy Spring neighborhood.

The third and fourth degrees were conferred upon six candidates, with R. Bentley Thomas, master, presiding. Those receiving the degrees were: Austin A. Lamar, Sandy Spring; Mrs. Ridgley Chichester and Mrs. Willard Harvey, both of Olney, and Clifton Martin Calyin Martin and Randolph Bready, all of Oakdale, Md.

Albert A. Ady, assistant county agent and lecturer of the Germantown Grange, had charge of the lecturer's hour and Miss Frances Lehman presented a paper, prepared by Mrs. Ethel Kirby on "My Ideal Form of County Government."

The Glee Club of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Fairland, Md., made plans for its annual picnic at a meeting held Tuesday night at the parish hall. The event will be held July 24 at Chapel Point. A group of 35 young people plan to attend. They will leave on a Wilson line steamer in the early morning and return the same night. Clark Adams, president, is in charge of arrangements.

Circle No. 2 of the Rockville Methodist Church will sponsor a food sale at Enright's store in Rockville, Md., on Saturday, July 13, at 9 a. m. Mrs. Hughes Monday is chairman of the committee arranging the sale.

Liquor Law Change Weighed by Peery

Selling Beverage by Drink Is Principal Issue.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 10.—Prelegislative consideration of possible amendments to Virginia's Alcohol Beverage Control law occupied Gov. Peery and members of the ABC board today.

The principal topic upon which the executive and the three-man board conferred was a suggestion that hotels and restaurants be allowed to dispense liquor by the drink. An effort was made to incorporate this provision in the law when it was passed, and it is conceded the argument will be renewed in January when the assembly meets.

Another point discussed was the proposed change allowing dual on-and-off-premise sale of wines and beer.

E. S. Tolson, Navy Veteran, to Retire

Provisions, Clothing Chief Has Served 37 Years.

Edward S. Tolson, chief of provisions and clothing in the Navy Department, will be 70 years old July 21, and at the end of the month he will complete 37 years' service in the Navy. He will retire July 31.

Tolson will receive a special letter of commendation from Rear Admiral Christian K. Peoples, chief of the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts.

Tolson come into the naval bureau in 1898 during the Spanish-American War. He had full charge of the records of the division during the World War when provisions and clothing activities of the bureau reached their highest proportions.

Colmar Manor Puts Torvestad In Mayor's Post

He received 141 votes over 104 cast for Burt M. Bromley, mayor incumbent, who defeated him in a close race two years ago.

William U. Wiles, a Torvestad-indorsed candidate, defeated George Cox in the race for Third Ward councilman. The vote was 55 to 32. Carl C. G. Nagle, unopposed candidate in the First Ward, received 30 votes.

A tie vote was cast for the referendum on the proposal to borrow up to 8 per cent of the town's assessed valuation for street improvement purposes. There were 86 votes for and 86 votes against the proposal.

With more than 100 votes, the citizens approved another proposal calling for levying of 10 cents on each $100 assessed valuation as a fire tax.

The recent session of the Maryland Legislature, which provided for the referendum, also provided that funds acquired in this manner should be given to some nearby fire company to be selected by town officials. The town does not have a department of its own.

$125,000 in Loans Goes to Farmers

Four Counties Get Funds From U. S. Credit Unit.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., July 10.—Approximately $125,000 in loans to farmers of Frederick, Washington and Montgomery counties have been made through the local office of the Frederick Production Credit Association since its set-up as a branch of the Farm Credit Administration, Washington, 18 months ago. Many of the borrowers have repaid their loans, while others are liquidating their indebtedness in monthly payments.

About 175 loans, ranging from $50 to $3,000, have been made, Thomas S. Anderson, secretary, said yesterday. While borrowers are given from one to three years to repay, most of the loans were made with maturities not exceeding one year. A large percentage of those who applied for loans were able to comply with the Government's plan for repayment. The money borrowed was used for refinancing old obligations and for purchase of livestock, fertilizer, seed and machinery.

When the office was established, Allegany and Garrett counties were included in the associaton. These western Maryland counties have been withdrawn and attached to another district. Loans are passed upon by a committee composed of W. W. Hodges, Montgomery County, and E. A. Shoemaker, Carroll County.

School Building Program Indorsed by Fairfax C. of C.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 345, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 128-J.

The Chamber of Commerce of Fairfax County, Va., has indorsed the proposed school building program now being studied by the county school board.

While no definite plan has been formulated by the school board it is understood to be considering the offer of the Federal Government to donate 45 per cent of the cost of such projects within the county. The county will finance the balance through a bond issue or a loan from the State literary fund. If a bond issue is voted by the taxpayers, the Government will purchase the bonds which will be repayable over a period of 30 years at a 4 per cent interest rate.

Some of the projects now being considered by the board are: a 6-room school center at Woodlawn, an auditorium and additional class rooms at the new Fairfax High School, additions at Annandale, Chesterbrook, Franconia and Lorton.

Sentiment Overwhelming.

The sentiment at the meeting of the Chamber Tuesday night in the Fairfax Courthouse was overwhelming in favor of the immediate construction of additional school space to relieve the already overcrowded condition existing in the county schools. They voted to urge the county board of supervisors and the school board to take advantage of the liberal offer of the Government.

Among the other questions discussed was the proposed rural electrification program sponsored by the Government. Under this plan the farmers organize a body to sponsor the construction of electric lines into rural communities. In turn the Government will advance funds for the project. The committee of the chamber investigating this question believed that at the present time it would be unwise to undertake such a project locally even though the farmers would be granted a long term loan.

Seek Extensions.

However, they agreed that there should be a committee of county residents to prevail upon the local electric company to extend its lines and the company to finance such extensions under the regular company rural extension service contract. A meeting of the county electrification committee will be held Friday night in the courthouse to consider further plans and assist the electric company conduct a survey of the county to determine the immediate needs.

Directors of the trade body elected to serve three-year terms were A. leGrand Stafford, Centreville District; C. H. Powell, Falls Church District; L. I. Dolph, Lee District; F. H. Wilkinson, Mount Vernon District, and C. C. Carr, Providence District. Mrs. E. D. Vosbury, of Merrifield, and Wirt Ferguson, of Centreville, were elected to serve at large.

Directors from the incorporated towns in the county elected at the same time were State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax; Laurence Waggaman, of Falls Church; Mrs. H. M. Sager, of Herndon, and Joseph Berry, of Vienna.

Tugwell Turns 44, Is a Golf Convert

By the Associated Press.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell was 44 years old yesterday, and the birthday found him with two new interests in life.

One is the job of resettling farmers in better land—a task the Undersecretary of Agriculture was given recently by President Roosevelt.

The other is golf. A week ago friends enticed Tugwell, devotee of the good-book-and-slippers form of recreation, out to a golf links. He did no bragging about his score, but it must have been fair, for he said golf is a pretty good game and he intends to play more of it.

Model Is Slenderized By Actions of Socialite

St. Louis, July 10 (AP).—Worry over actions of Dawson Burns, jr., prominent socially in New York, caused her to lose 25 pounds, his comely artist model-wife commented here today in learning Burns had been granted a Reno divorce.

Mrs. Anne Rumph Burns, the wife, a St. Louis debutante of 1931, expressed indignation that Burns had charged cruelty. She came here from New York four months ago avowedly to establish residence before filing a divorce action.

"I was the one who was going to allege cruelty," Mrs. Burns said. "He had no grounds at all to make such a charge. Incompatibility would be true enough."

Peery Accepts Trade Body's Bid to Outing

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 562.

Gov. George C. Peery has accepted the invitation of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce to attend the quarterly meeting of the trade body, to be held at Fort Washington, Md., August 2. An invitation has also been extended to Gov. Nice of Maryland by Dan S. Hollenga, business manager, to meet Gov. Peery and his party when they reach the Maryland shore.

Present plans provide the U. S. S. Rucker will leave from the Ford Motor Co.'s. pier at the foot of Franklin street at 5 p. m., August 2. The Alexandria Citizens Band will accompany the party to Fort Washington.

John U. Reardon, chairman of the committee on arrangements, expects that 500 persons will make the trip. Many reservations have already been made.

The plans for establishing an abattoir in Alexandria, by a Washington and Baltimore concern, which caused considerable discussion several months ago, have been abandoned, according to Mayor E. C. Davison. No formal application was ever submitted for a permit, although the company issued a prospectus which included the abattoir.

Following newspaper reports of the company's intentions, a number of residents appeared before the city council to protest against the abattoir which they declared, would adversely affect the value of their residence property.

Dr. William Lewis Schafer, city health officer, was the speaker at the meeting of the Alexandria Business and Professional Women's Club held on Tuesday evening in the Virginia Room of the George Mason Hotel, and presided over by Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, a past president, in the absence from the city of the president, Mrs. George W. Ramby, and the vice president, Miss Corinne T. Reardon.

The program was in charge of the health chairman, Mrs. Edna G. Kennedy, and Dr. Schafer gave an interesting talk on health rules, particularly during the summer months.

A telegram was received from Mrs. Geline McDonald Bowman, of Richmond, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Miss Elizabeth M. Ramey, of Alexandria, president of the Virginia Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and the Virginia delegation en route to Seattle, Wash., to attend the national convention to open in that city on Sunday, next.

Special guests at the meeting were Dr. and Mrs. Schafer and Mrs. Marguerite Davis Rowlan, city health nurse, and a charter member of the club.

The new annex to the Alexandria Hospital, which has just been completed, will be open to visitors between 3 and 5 o'clock this afternoon. Urban S. Lambert, president of the board of directors, will deliver a dedicatory address. Invocation will be offered by the Rev. William B. McIlwaine, D. D., pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church. Committees of the board of lady managers will be on duty on each floor to conduct visitors over the new building.

The corner stone of the annex was laid December 5, 1934, the birthday anniversary of the superintendent, Miss Fanny Carter.

The Republicans of Alexandria have nominated F. Clinton Knight, former postmaster, to be delegate from Alexandria to the State Legislature. The meeting was presided over by John Barton Phillips, chairman of the city Republican committee.

Prof. Ignatius Sprague, of Harvard University, will be guest speaker at the meeting today of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club. He will discuss the financial situation brought about by the New Deal.

Richard Harrison Payne, 52 years old, a carpenter, died yesterday at his home, 307 West Bellefonte avenue, Alexandria. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Carolina Payne, and a son, M. C. Payne. The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

New York, July 10.

Fred Astaire is the same nice person that he was when I used to visit himbackstage at the New Amsterdam Theater during the run of "Band Wagon" . . . I met him again last night, now the cinmea star who jams theaters all over the world, and he hasn't changed even a little bit . . . His flicker success actually dumbfounded him . . . "When 'Flying Down to Rio' was completed," explained Astaire, "I was so discouraged by the way I'd danced the 'Carioca' that I went to Pandro Berman, RKO producer, and begged him to cut it out of the picture. He heard me out and then said that he disagreed with me, that the dance was great. I asked him if the scenes could be retaken. He said that it was unnecessary. So I went to England to forget about it. When my friends started cabling me, weeks later, that the picture was a terrific success, I honestly thought they were ribbing me. It seemed incredible, because, to my own eyes, I looked awkward in the dance."

• • • •

Recollections of those backstage visits to Astaire at the New Amsterdam are very vivid in my mind, because I'd just started writing a Broadway column . . . He was one of the first friends I made in the theatrical profession, and he used to suggest ideas for me to write . . . The fact that I'd written sports for years probably explained the rapidity of the friendship, for he had a racing stable, and was a great sporting page reader . . . One of his horses was named Nick the Greek . . . I asked him about the nag last night, and learned he had been sold, although he won a lot of races in England . . . He had named the thoroughbred after the famous Nick the Greek, who, at that time, was going with a girl in the "Band Wagon" chorus . . . Backstage at the New Amsterdam, too, was Frank Morgan, another member of the cast headed for Hollywood prominence.

• • • •

Sitting on Astaire's right, at the farewell party to Countess Dorothy di Frasso, was Mrs. Harrison Williams . . . On his left, was the charming Mrs. Donald Ogden Stewart . . . Across from them sat the Grover A. Wahlens . . . Next to Mr. Whalen was Bob Rubin, one of the big powers of M.-G.-M., chatting animatedly with Tullio Carminati . . . In all, there were 27 of us at the Central Park Casino party, the Joe Bryans, Joan Whitney, stunning Mary Taylor, John MacLain, Olive McClure, Lucius Ordway, young Tom Phipps, Serge Obolensky, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Winthrop, Bert Taylor, Moorehead Patterson.

• • • •

Mrs. Harrison Williams, hailed by European style connoiseurs as the best dressed lady of the generation, is a trifle impatient with the title . . . She answered my astonishment at this remark logically enough . . . "If I had been called the most intelligent woman in the world, I would have felt flattered," she said . . . "Or even if they had said I was a better-than-average tennis player, or an excellent gardener, or a good housekeeper, it would have pleased me, because I do play a good game of tennis, I am a good gardener, and I pride myself on my housekeeping. I take credit for these things because I really work at 'em. I never have devoted much time to clothes, so the title they conferred on me hasn't a great deal of significance." I asked the slim, blue-eyed Mrs. Williams to name her conception of the best dressed woman: "Lorraine McAdoo," she said. "She has more chic in her little finger than most women have in their entire wardrobe."

• • • •

Notes: Benay Venuta will take over the Ethel Merman role in "Anything Goes" on July 29 . . . Vincent Youmans, one of the greatest song writers of all time, convalescing in the West, calls his estate: "Time On My Hands, Colorado" . . . It is the title of a song he wrote . . . Lou Holtz goes into the Colony Club at West End, N. J., for the week-end . . . Marguerite Clarke, star of silent pictures, will be on the Louisiana State Censors' Board, with Ellis Irwin, Lou's brother, as chairman . . . Huey Long made the appointments . . . The James J. Braddocks are not expecting Sir Stork . . . He canceled his vaudeville tour at Boston because the strain of the fight brought his wife to a nervous breakdown . . . Jake Factor denies he is bankrolling a Jersey spot . . . Harry Content, president of the Hollywood Golf Club, will be feted Saturday . . . Phil Harris goes into the Waldorf August 15, after a record-cracking tour of the Southwest . . . Janice Lifson, Met diving champ, wires: "For heaven's sake, Ed, give his friends a break. It's Art Levin, Dartmouth, not Rutgers" . . . Harry Cohn, Columbia Pictures prexy, is in town and cheered by the Grace Moore picture grosses . . . Paul Sabin will wed Virginia Paxton . . . Dick Strongman, Woolworth vice president, married a Polish actress in London last week . . . Olive McClure will be operated on, appendix.

• • • •

Baldwin Foes Draw Answer From Premier

By the Associated Press.

London, July 10.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin today sharply told House of Commons critics of his cabinet personnel that the prime minister was "absolute" master in the selection of his ministers.

Replying to George Lansbury, leader of the labor opposition, who accused Baldwin of "political dishonesty" in picking cabinet members "not * * * for ability, but just to represent the various sections of the national government," the prime minister denied the Commons' right to challenge or interfere.

Lansbury and another labor minister, Tom Smith, turned especially bitter fire upon Anthony Eden, for whom the post of secretary for League of Nations affairs was created, and Malcolm MacDonald, son of former Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald whom Baldwin named secretary for colonies.

Both Held Unnecessary.

The veteran labor leader asserted both appointments were unfair and unnecessary, saying the elder MacDonald's shift from prime minister to lord president of the council and his son's appointment to an office paying £5,000 (almost $25,000) annually "leaves a very ugly taste in the mouth."

To Lansbury's criticism of Eden, Baldwin returned the information that Eden's post was only temporary, an "experiment" in separating tasks of the foreign office between Eden and Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare because "there have never been more matters for this country, Europe and the world than exist today in foreign affairs."

"I think it (Eden's cabinet post) will exist about another 12 months," he said.

Baldwin leaped to his feet and shouted:

"That's not true!"

The labor member persisted in his charge, however.

Lansbury, in his speech, also referred sardonically to Sir John Simon's recently-ended service as foreign minister, asking Baldwin whether he agreed "with those who say Simon proved himself the worst foreign minister in modern times." He asked:

"Is that the reason why he was switched to the home office?"

Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, vice chancellor and leader of the Fascist Heimwehr, who has often been mentioned as possible future regent of Austria, was absent, however. He is in Italy.

A government spokesman, in presenting the bill to the Diet, resoundingly condemned the 1919 confiscations, saying Austria's legislators were influenced then by the spirit of bolshevism sweeping across Europe from Moscow.

The elder Axtell was knocked unconscious and his son suffered a sprained shoulder and possible internal injuries, for which he was being treated at Memorial Hospital here today.

disclosures that two new troop divisions would be created immediately.

Already concentrated in Italy's African colonies are more than 100,000 soldiers and expert workmen, and 2,000 more Black Shirt volunteers sailed from Naples today aboard the steamship Belvedere. Two thousand others were to leave this evening aboard the Colombo, while other thousands awaited embarkation at several ports.

Other developments in the nation's sweeping mobilization for an "inexorable" campaign against Emperor Haile Selassie's kingdom included the call to arms issued to noncommissioned officers and specialists of the 1909 and 1910 classes, and preparations to summon other specialists, class of 1912, were made.

Aggression Claimed.

The Giornale article said Italy's possession of Ualual, where Italians and Ethiopians fought last December, had been so clearly established and Ethiopian aggression so clearly proved that Ethiopia had no recourse but to try to introduce into sessions of the conciliation commission meeting in the Netherlands subjects already ruled out by the league council.

Declaring Italy would not permit the appointment of a fifth neutral arbitrator as provided in the council's instructions, the newspaper said that proposal "supposes that a fifth arbitrator could substitute his own will for that of the Italian government so clearly manifested in the negotiations for a compromise at Geneva."

"It is needless to say," the article added, "that Italy can not accept such a step."

Peace Moves Futile, Britain Believes

By the United Press.

London, July 10.—Britain tonight feared her efforts to avert war between Italy and Abyssinia will fail.

Her moves for peace were continued today in an atmosphere of gloom as the cabinet met to prepare an important declaration to be delivered to the House of Commons tomorrow by Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary.

Simultaneously the government consulted the dominions, asking opinions as to the Italo-Abyssinian conflict and its possible repercussions on British policy in the League of Nations.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin presided over a cabinet meeting which approved Sir Samuel's pending declarations to clarify the British position regarding East Africa, German naval developments, and negotiations for a western air pact.

In the House of Commons, Capt. R. Anthony Eden, secretary for league affairs, reiterated the government was determined to continue endeavors with others to settle the dispute peacefully.

Geoffrey Mander, member for Wolverhampton, asked:

"Will the government send representations to Italy that Britain considers it a matter of honor and vital interest not to default on our obligations under the league covenant?"

Eden said he presumed Mander referred to the situation which would arise if Italy resorts to war in disregard of her obligations under the covenant.

"Such a situation has not yet arisen," Eden said. "I trust it will not arise."

Britain Trains Subjects in Air Raid Protection

Program Sent to All Local Authorities Denies Threat of War.

By the Associated Press.

London, July 10.—A comprehensive program for protecting Britain's population against air raids went out today to all local authorities in England, Scotland and Wales, accompanied by assurances that "the need for these measures in no way implies risk of war."

The government's circular, which made plain that local authorities would be responsible in the final analysis for protection of the public, also pledged the government to continue striving for peace.

Issuance of the instructions, it said, did not "imply any relaxation of effort on the part of his majesty's government to insure the promotion and maintenance of peace by all means in their power, and to use to the full the machinery of the League of Nations and other instruments for guaranteeing peace."

The Government already has made arrangements for an initial supply of respirators to be allotted partly for training in their use against gas and partly to build up reserves.

It was announced the work would be begun along these lines:

1. Accumulation of reserve stocks of respirators and protective clothing for the use of those engaged in precautionary measures.

2. Building up of reserves of "bleach powder" for decontamination work.

3. Probable establishment of an anti-gas school for civilians.

4. Use of the Red Cross and the Order of St. John Ambulance Corps to assist in the enrollment and training of an anti-gas medical emergency corps.

counts of events at Addis Ababa, where it has been raining for weeks.

Among them were many naturalized Americans, formerly of Greek or other Near East origin. They were traders in Abyssinia who spent years in the risky ivory business, traveling far down the River Nile into East Africa where they traded with elephant poachers. Much of their ivory now crams Djibouti warehouses.

Italian nuns, black gowned, were picturesque figures aboard the refugee train. Burned by the sun almost as black as their pupils, they brought many little girls born of Abyssinian mothers and Italian fathers.

Before they fled Addis Ababa they closed the Maria della Consollata Convent School.

French authorities in this tiny Somaliland coast colony are hard put to find accommodations, not only for the 500 new refugees, but for hundreds of wealthy Abyssinians who are proceeding to safety at Red Sea and Mediterranean ports, carrying priceless jewels and great sums in gold under their flowing white robes.

Hotels are unable to accommodate the arrivals. French schools operated by Franciscan nuns housed several hundred refugees until Italian, British and French steamers arrive to take them to Europe.

Djibouti is knee-deep in mud except on the few paved streets downtown. The arriving refugees were able to communicate with their families through the two radio stations linked with Bordeaux.

Royal Decree of Strict Regimentation Designed as Rebuilding Step.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, July 10.—The Belgian government brought most of the nation's savings banks under strict regimentation today in an effort to prevent recurrence of conditions such as led to the collapse of several important banks in 1934 and early this year.

Only five large institutions—the National Bank, the National Savings Bank, the Congo Bank, the National Society for Industrial Credit and the Caisse Centrale de la Petite Epargne (Central Savings Bank for Small Depositors)—were exempted from stiff control measures imposed by royal decree.

Step in Reconstruction.

The control measures, devised as another step in the government's financial reconstruction following upon the recent devaluation of the belga, were approved by the affected banks late in March, when the government was in the midst of its devaluated struggles. All quarters commented favorably on the decree.

In substance, the decree provides:

1. Operations of deposit banks are brought under control of eight commissioners selected by the bankers, the national bank and the newly created Institute for Rediscount Guarantee.

2. The committee will survey relations between paid-in capital sums deposited in banks and investments.

3. Banks must submit statements to the national bank and publish yearly balance sheets.

4. Legal reserves of the banks must comprise State, communal or provincial debentures, or debentures of State-controlled bodies.

5. "Revisors" elected by the shareholders, who may not engage in general banking business, will supervise compliance with the decree and be responsible to the committee.

6. A bank board member may not be a member of a board of a commercial or industrial society.

7. All publicity expenses of banks must be of a "strictly commercial character."

The control proposal met some criticism in its early stages from sources which charged that it was a socialist measure merely meant to establish control over private incomes for taxation purposes. This objection was met by stipulations that the "revisors" would not be allowed to communicate their findings to tax agents.

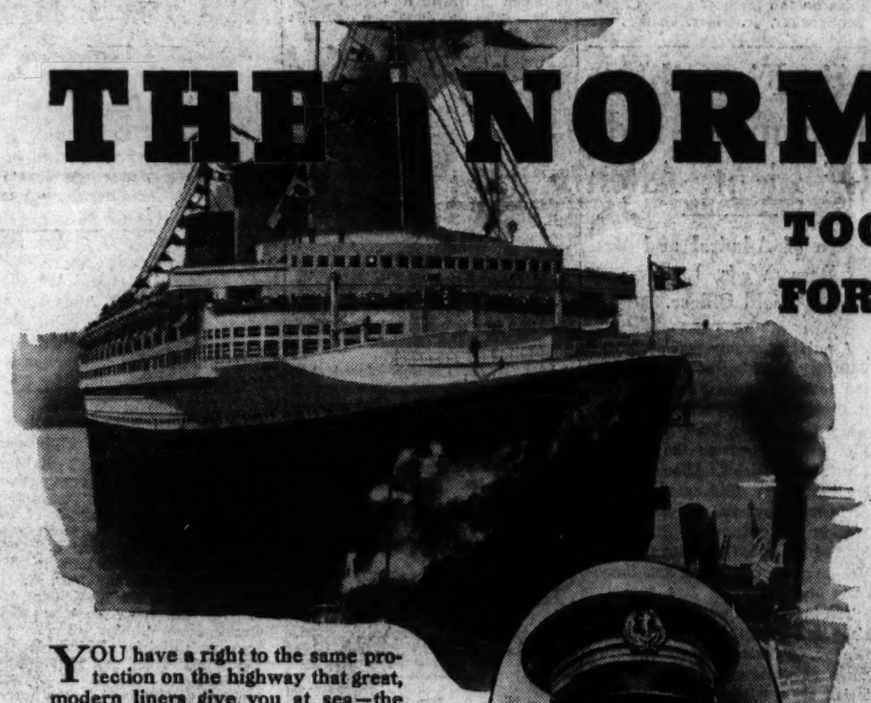
THE NORMANDIE



TOO . . . IS ALL OF STEEL FOR GREATEST STRENGTH AND SAFETY

SAYS

CAPT. RENE PUGNET

"I am happy to know that Hudson-built automobiles now are constructed all of steel. In this respect they have something in common with our great ship, the S. S. Normandie. The Normandie was built not only to give trans-Atlantic passengers the fastest and most enjoyable crossing, but also the safest. Steel construction helps provide this maximum security. Steel construction, I believe, is absolutely essential where great strength is needed."

RENÉ PUGNET, Captain, S. S. Normandie

YOU have a right to the same protection on the highway that great, modern liners give you at sea—the protection of steel. And you get it, in a Hudson or a Terraplane.

You find safety you've never known before—in America's first bodies all of steel—inner structure, sides, pillars, floor and roof—not a bit of wood in any structural part.

You enjoy a new kind of performance, too. You laugh at hills—in cars that hold 77 official records for speed, acceleration, hill climbing. You drive great distances without fatigue—behind the smoothest motors built.

You're sure of quicker, safer stopping—with brakes that have cut police requirements squarely in half, in public tests from coast to coast.

You sail past filling stations—in cars that have proved their amazing gasoline economy in nation-wide tests. And you find upkeep cost surprisingly low, as thousands of sworn statements from owners testify.

Drive a Hudson or Terraplane today—and ask about the low cost Hudson financing plan.

THE LAST WORD . . . in modern ships and modern cars

Ladies Night Inaugurated By Carabao

Order Holds 'Wallowette' at Army and Navy Country Club.

Gen. Matthews Presides and Col. Reisinger Acts as Bomberino.

The Military Order of the Carabao, famous for its annual wallow each winter, introduced an innovation last night by giving a "Wallowette" at the Army and Navy Country Club. The order was established 35 years ago and is composed of officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps who served in the Philippines during the insurrection. This is the first occasion that the ladies have been permitted to take part in the festivities.

The order was organized in 1900 to foster a high standard of military and social duty and to perpetuate the memories and associations of military service in the Philippines during the early days of American occupation. The idea to form the order was conceived at a dinner at the Officers' Club in Manila shortly after the return of troops from China. The first meeting was held at the quarters of Maj. B. H. Randolph and Brig. Gen. George P. Scriven. The name was selected in recognition of the service rendered to the American forces by the faithful carabao, principal beast of burden in the Philippines and proved indispensable as the main reliance of the American Army in transporting supplies. One of the first batteries of American artillery that ever operated in the Philippines was drawn by carabaos. The "Days of the Empire" grow more remote as time passes, but the spirit and memories and romance of those days will live forever through the members of the order.

Reminiscent of Luzon.

The large dining room of the Country Club was a profusion of palms and bamboo and, with a number of the ladies dressed in Filipino costumes, the scene was reminiscent of the jungles of Luzon and old Manila days. Soft Oriental music by the United States Marine Band and the tropical setting awakened many memories of the romance and spirit of the Far East.

Throughout the evening the clang of the bombinero's bell rang often and merrily, introducing songs, old and new, that are characteristic of Carabao affairs and several sketches were presented. A parody on the "Isle of Capri" written especially for this occasion was quite a hit.

"Isle of Luzon."

'Twas on the Isle of Lu-zon that I met her
Be-neath the shade of an old Ni-pa shack—
Oh, I can still see the Ni-nos a-round her
And the sheen on her brown little back,
She was as sweet as a Sep-tem-ber morn-ing,
And like a nut-brown rose to look u-pon,
And tho' I sailed for Shang-hai in the morn-ing,
Still my heart's on the Isle of Lu-zon,
Typhoon time was nearly o-ver,
Blue Ma-ni-la sky a-bove,
She said, "Soldier you're a rover,
Me no sa-be your line of love."
She whispered laugh-ing, "You one warm ru-bi-o"
'Twas goodbye on the Isle of Lu-zon.

Sheer Batiste Night Dresses Are Displayed

Attractive and Practical, They Are Smartly Designed.

By Dudley Harmon.

Pinch Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

WHILE wandering around a downtown department store recently, we came across some batiste nightgowns which are delectable enough to make you want to wear them for evening dresses. Made in two different styles, with a low back on a demure little round collar, they look as though they had been especially invented with a hot Washington night in mind. Even the most restless bed-tosser should be able to remain cool and collected in one of these, as they are so sheer as to weigh virtually nothing. The gowns have strapped sunbacks and a ruffle around the hem, while the pajamas are fitted tight at the waist and cut full around the bottom of the trousers. All are gayly polka-dotted in red, green, blue or black. Attractive and practical, they cost only $1.09.

Treatment for Pores.

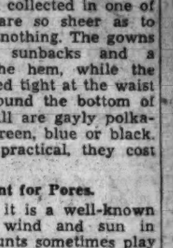
ALTHOUGH it is a well-known fact that wind and sun in large amounts sometimes play havoc with one's skin, it is perhaps not so widely known that during the summer one's circulation is inclined to slow up a bit. This causes a relaxation of the facial muscles, with a resulting enlargement of the pores. It is therefore more important during the summer than any other season to pay close attention to the care of the pores.

A local department store is featuring this week a special pack treatment to keep the pores in good condition. This treatment consists of three separate ingredients: A herb mixture, a balsam oil and a cream. The herbal mixture comes in a tiny bag, which you wet with warm water and then use on the face exactly as a washrag. This opens the pores and gets rid of the dirt. Then you mixe the oil with the cream, and apply, leaving it on for the rest of the night. This second step closes the pores. The herb pack, the oil and the cream cost a dollar apiece, and are guaranteed to work wonders on your face. But don't use the combination more than three times a week.

Another thing—with each $1.50 purchase of these cosmetics you are given an attractive little make-up kit, containing cleansing creams, a skin freshener and powder and rouge.

Attractive Evening Capes.

A LOCAL department store has done its share to relieve the midsummer style doldrums by getting in something new and different in evening capes. These little capes were designed by a widely known New York house, and ladies will find them the latest wrinkle along this line. They come in several styles and colors. For as little as $5.95, you can get an adorable little hip-length one in net, with a froth of ruffles at the hem and a tie under the chin of the same material. Another model, at $9.75, comes in a luscious magenta shade, and has large bishop sleeves. For those who like ruffs, there is a very Elizabethan one at $19.75, which can be worn tight under the chin or loosely about the shoulders. The prize package of them all, however, is a hip-length cape made of batiste and organdie with insets of Alencon lace. Dainty and very lovely, it sells for $17.50. These capes are just what you need to freshen up your summer evening costumes.



Special Gift Box.

THIS SAME STORE is featuring a special little gift box containing a compact and handkerchief in matching shades. The compact itself usually sells for $1.50, and the handkerchief for 50 cents, but now you can get them both for $1. The compact is a fine enamel, with chromium inside. It contains loose powder. An attractive and novel feature is that you open up the powder lid simply by running your finger over the clasp, hence no broken finger nails or lost tempers in trying to jam up the lid in the usual way. The handkerchief is pure linen and handrolled.

New Sun Tan Powder.

THE SAME store also is introducing a new sun tan powder, which is put out by one of the larger cosmetic houses. It's a brand-new shade, and one which should become most people. The price is $1.50.

Pointers Given Secretaries By Aid to 6 Cabinet Men

MRS. MARIE E. McPHERSON. Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. McPherson Believes Punctuality, Close Attention to Details and Loyalty as Important as Unusual Talents.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IF THERE'S ANYONE in Washington—a city of good secretaries—who should know the qualifications for a superior office worker, it's Mrs. Martha E. McPherson, who worked personally for Secretaries of War Newton D. Baker and John W. Weeks, was confidential secretary to Secretaries of War Dwight W. Davis, James W. Good and Patrick J. Hurley, and is now serving in that capacity to the present Secretary of War.

A tall, slender woman whose quiet dignity is as impressive as her gr[illegible]usness and tact, Mrs. McPherson was reticent to express her opinion on qualities essential to a secretary's success, because as she expressed it, "I'm not sure I know."

To what special qualities then, did she attribute her own success? Punctuality? Prompt attention to seemingly small details? Loyalty to her superiors?

"These are important for any secretary," she replied. "I'd rather not talk about myself. You see, the chief thing a confidential secretary has to do is to keep quiet about herself and her employer's business. Let's just discuss the "ideal secretary," what she does, and what she avoids doing."

Lesser Virtues Championed.

Then, quietly protesting again that she was "talking as an authority," she discussed some of the qualities that contribute to a secretary's success. She believes "the lesser virtues"—punctuality, prompt attention to small details, and cooperation with other employes are equally as important as unusual talents.

"And certainly a secretary must be like people, and must be impersonal in her manner, must enjoy making contacts with the public, must like people, and must be sincere in her dealings with people," she went on. "It should go without saying, also, that she must be painstaking in all features of her work, intensely loyal to whomever she serves, and faithful to her job—so much so, in fact, she makes it her chief interest."

Mrs. McPherson is also convinced an absolutely dependable person is, in the long run, of more value in an office than one who "is brilliant in spots," because routine is a large part of any secretary's work.

In view of this, would she admit there were certain persons, inured to routine, who were definitely "secretarial types?"

She wouldn't. It wasn't so much a matter of being inured to routine, she said, as it was in applying oneself faithfully to the job in hand.

"And that, of course, is necessary to any type of work," she said. "Besides, I've always felt a good secretary needed to be imaginative, versatile and adaptable in order to be a success. These qualities aren't generally attributed to persons designated as "secretarial types!"

Attired in Tailored Dress.

Mrs. McPherson wouldn't be ensnared into a discussion of what the well-dressed secretary should wear. But, attired in a cream-colored piece dress cut on tailored lines and set off with brown accessories, she was a good illustration of what she wouldn't talk about.

"What one wears is such a personal matter, I'd rather not give any suggestions," she said. "It seems to me most women in public life today tend to wear tailored clothes or dresses cut on simple lines."

It would seem any hints Mrs. McPherson would give secretaries or would-be secretaries would be worth consideration. For there are few women in Washington, or elsewhere, who have a worthier record than she. The value previous employers have placed upon her services is reflected in the letter of recommendation Patrick J. Hurley gave her to present to his successor. It said in part:

"Mrs. McPherson is an indefatigable worker, is sincere in her contacts with the public, and her genuine interest in people, together with her love of service and cooperation, make her an ideal person for the position she fills."

She was born in Rotherhan, England, a town made famous by Sir Walter Scott in his novel, "Ivanhoe." Coming to this country when she was 2 years old, she later attended Virginia Seminary, then Spencerian Business College, where she stayed on to teach two years after graduation.

Her chief interests other than her work, she admitted, are her two sons and her husband. These, incidentally, are the three principal reasons she was a homemaker "so many years I began to wonder I'd ever be able to go back into the business world. Perhaps I would never have tried if it hadn't been for the war," she explained. "When my husband enlisted I entered Government service." And was soon in the office of the Secretary of War, where she has remained ever since.

Girls in Wheat Fields To Earn College Cash

For years young men have paid college expenses by going to the Kansas wheat fields. Now young women are following suit.

In the fields about Dodge City, girls are driving the trucks in which the wheat is carried to the elevators. City as well as farm girls are raising funds for their college expenses in this manner. The trucks follow the harvester and thresher combine until they are loaded, then go to the elevators.

College Graduate Who Is to Make Conducted Tour of Europe in August Asks What Is Required in Smart and Economical Wardrobe.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am going to Europe for the month of August on a conducted tour of seven countries and am sailing on the S. S. Normandie. I am particularly anxious to know the kind and number of clothes I will need. Also I want to know about the shoes that are appropriate.

* * * *

I am a young girl, college graduate, and while I want to be smartly dressed, I also want to be economical. About how much do you think my clothes would cost me? I would greatly appreciate an itemized list of these clothes. May I have an early reply? M. E. M.

Wardrobe for Traveler.

DEAR M. E. M.: Let's begin with the clothing you will need on board ship. If you go first class, you will need three evening dresses, as dressing for dinner is more or less obligatory. If you go tourist, however, you will need only one. Except for an occasional gala event, such as the ship's concert, tourist passengers do not don evening dress, customary dinner wear being an afternoon dress. I suggest you take along three or four crepe or silk dresses, two of a summery materials and two in plain dark colors and heavier texture.

* * * *

For daytime wear sports clothes are smartest on shipboard, whether for first class or tourist passengers. I would include two washable tennis dresses in case the weather is warm, to wear for deck tennis and strolling on deck. It would be a good idea to take along a cardigan to don when cool breezes spring up. Any kind of jacket will do, but a cardigan is the smartest. For cool or rainy days, which you are most likely to encounter on the return trip, take along one or two knitted suits, or some tweed skirt and sweater ensembles.

* * * *

Be sure to take along a heavy tweed coat for sitting out on deck at night. A lighter-weight coat is another necessity, and may be made of jersey, light-weight tweed or flannel.

As for shoes, wear with your various outfits the same type of shoe you would wear on land. That is to say, rubber-soled shoes with the tennis dresses and sweater suits; dressier shoes with your silk dresses and evening shoes with your evening dresses.

If you had specified the countries you intend to visit, I should be better able to advise you in the matter of wardrobe. However, I am proceeding on the premise that you will visit countries in both the north and south of Europe.

* * * *

France, England and Germany have about the same climate in summer as does the United States. The Scandinavian countries are cooler, and Italy, Greece and Spain are often quite hot. For traveling and sightseeing in the first three-named countries, I recommend that you wear silk dresses, dark enough in color not to show soil easily, yet light weight enough to be cool.

* * * *

For traveling and sightseeing in Italy, Greece and Spain, you will need washable summer dresses, something cool and light in weight and color, although nothing without sleeves.

As sightseeing is usually hard on one's feet, be sure to include at least three pairs of stout walking shoes. If you plan to go on mountain excursions in Switzerland, take along a heavy tweed suit chosen with a view to warmth and freedom of action in walking and climbing.

* * * *

Since European stockings are expensive and badly made, be sure to take along enough hose to last throughout the trip. I would summarize your wardrobe needs as follows:

1 heavy tweed coat.
1 lightweight coat (tweed or jersey).
1 cardigan.
2 sweater suits.
Several silk dresses, two fairly tailored; the others less so.
One to 3 evening dresses, depending on whether you go first-class or tourist.
1 pair of rubber-soled sports or tennis shoes.
1 evening wrap.
1 dozen pairs of silk hose.
4 suits of pajamas.
Plenty of underwear (as you must be prepared to wait on laundry service).

* * * *

As for expense of such a wardrobe, with careful shopping I should think you could get everything you need for about $130. No doubt many of these articles are already in your wardrobe, so you may not have to spend that much.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

What TODAY Means

"Cancer.."

IF JULY 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a. m. until noon, from 2 to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a. m., from 4 to 6 p. m., and from 9 to 11 p. m.

Should someone try to infringe on your rights this day, a bold stand probably will make them respect your claims. Strong characters are likely to try to impose on those they think they can dominate, so be careful in your dealings with anyone inclined to be domineering. A good many people will be susceptible to the atmospheric conditions on this date, their spirits showing a decided reaction to them. Squabbles in business transactions can be easily developed, unless a good deal of diplomacy is used in all commercial contacts.

This ought to be a good day for making financial arrangements, or planning expenditures. Convivial affairs require that moderation be exercised, if they are to be successful from every viewpoint. Married and engaged couples, and those who contemplate proposing matrimony, will have to be careful that unfounded jealousy does not poison their minds.

If a woman and July 11 is your birthday, your strong personality will be a great asset, especially in securing the co-operation of your friends, if their help is needed. You should take an active part in social affairs, as you have the magnetism essential for a potential leader. If forced to earn a living, it is advisable for you to try to specialize in some particular line Artistically inclined, you should be very successful if you study interior decorating, painting, writing, architecture, antiques or the designing of women's wearing apparel. A lover of humanity, you may also do excellent work in social welfare, or along educational lines. Sympathetic as well as affectionate, you should be a very happy wife and mother.

The child born on July 11 from the time it enters until it leaves school, may require loving encouragement. Probably of a sensitive disposition, care must be exercised not to hurt its feelings by ridicule or severity.

If a man and July 11 is your natal day, you should be very popular both at home and abroad. Your keen sense of humor probably will make you much sought after for social affairs. Scientific, historical or statistical research work, as well as literary, educational or a commercial line of activity will possibly provide the right means for your best results.

Pattern No. 954.

A SLEEVELESS, easy-to-make daytime dress for summer, yet it has that quality of charm and interest that we want, even in our most utilitarian clothes. The sailor collar, the little pockets put on at an angle, the well-cut skirt—these are the touches that distinguish the frock.

The back may be high, or a low sun-back cut. The pattern also includes a long-sleeved, small collared version. For this warm weather dress, linen, novelty cotton, seersucker, shantung or pique are suggested. Designed for sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Size 16 (34) requires 3¾ yards of 35-inch fabric for the entire sleeveless frock.

Gay Linen or Chiffon Scarfs Perk-up Summer Wardrobe

HOW TO PERK up the summer wardrobe is a question every woman faces as mid-July days approach. For the perking up must be done with an eye to fall styles. And the outstanding feature of these, according to fashion experts, is the lower and open neckline.

This fashion development adds importance to scarfs and vestees. The smartest of these, says Pictorial Review, are bright chiffon Ascot scarfs for the white spectator sports dresses and gay linen ones for the more tailored sports frocks and suits. You can add a spot of white or color to any costume with a vestee, tuck-in or gillet. Sheer, soft, frilly ones are particularly good with summer dresses. Crisp revers and starchy stand-up collars are smart with wool frocks for fall.

New trimming touches for fall are Alencon lace bows and jabots on dark, sheer afternoon dresses. White frogs, white tassels and white cord girdles and ties are used to accent black crepe street dresses. Fringe is chic for edging necklines and sleeves. Narrow, tubular dog-collar patent leather belts, fastened with a metal harness buckle, are ideal for sports wear. Silver kid and silver pipings are smart for crepe dinner dresses.

The newest vogue in evening jewelry is the revival of the jeweled dog collar, inspired by Edwardian fashions. These are of jewel-tone beads and rhinestone catches, or three-strand collars of pearls.

No Fare Excels In Usefulness The Sandwich

Hostesses Have a Man—a British Earl—to Thank for Tasty Invention.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THANK goodness for the sandwich. Or perhaps we had better thank the fourth Earl of Sandwich, that inveterate card player, who, in order that he might not lose a minute from the game, told a servant to bring a slice of meat between two slices of bread, so that he could eat it without knife, fork or plate while he continued to play.

You can guess the result. The Earl and his friends were so pleased with the flavor of the snack and the convenience of the combination, that he repeated the order time and again. It didn't take long for the idea to spread from house to house. Now every country and and clime are enjoying the "sandwich" as it was immediately dubbed.

Husbands will rejoice in this tale, for doesn't it definitely say that the sandwich was created to be eaten without knife and fork?

The hostess almost always falls back on the sandich for party refreshments. Sandwiches lend themselves to so many variations—there are tricky rolled ones, sandwich loaves that when sliced look like bits of Roman striped ribbon, double and triple deckers for the lusty appetite, and opened-faced ones. Each has its important place on the menu.

The Earl himself gave us a dish that has been prized for years because of its convenience of combination, but his servant was responsible for the actual success of the morsel because he made a sandwich that was pleasing in flavor.

Should Be Attractive.

A well-made sandwich fills the simple requirements of a summer luncheon gracefully. Open-faced, single or double-decker, it matters not, so long as the sandwich is attractive and pleasing to the taste. The convenience of a sandwich luncheon will delight any woman.

Everyone agrees that the bread for a sandwich should be cut in thin, even slices. The edges should be neat, and though it is important to have the filling come out to the edge of the bread, under no circumstances is it permissible to detect any crowding out from between the slices. Day-old bread of close, firm texture is the best to use.

All sorts of breads can be used to make sandwiches—white, brown, rye, graham, raisin, date, nut, etc., and sometimes two or more kinds are used together. Any foodstuff that blends in flavor and texture and can be counted upon not to give way to sogginess can be used as a sandwich filling.

Here is a version of the broiled open-face sandwich, which has become so popular as a main luncheon dish.

Broiled Tomato Sandwich.

8 slices tomato, broiled
8 slices bread, toasted
1 recipe hot mayonnaise puff (see below)

Salt tomato slices. Place on slices of toast. Pile generously with mayonnaise puff mixture. Slip under broiler for 1 minute, or until delicately browned. Serve at once. Rounds of toast or toasted English muffins may be used.

Hot Mayonnaise Puff.

1 cup mayonnaise
1 egg white, stiffly beaten

Fold mayonnaise into egg white gently but thoroughly. Use as directed above. The mayonnaise may also be used to top crackers. These, too, should be put under the broiler for about 1 minute or until delicately browned. Serve as an accompaniment for fruit or vegetable salads or with beverages as canapes.

Andy: Tell your boss about that 1934 Buick De Luxe Sedan advertised in Post Want Ads today. It's a beauty and he can save plenty on it. Joe.

Skin Tests Aid Asthma Treatment

Science Long Has Tried to Detect Offending Protein.

Laboratory Data Helpful but Can't Replace Study of Patient.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FOR nearly a quarter of a century research workers have been attempting to identify asthma with the presence of some particular protein to which the individual is susceptible. By susceptibility we mean that absorption of the protein affects the nervous system, causing blood vessels to dilate or to narrow, muscles to contract, and glands to secrete—the whole resulting in a general upsetting of many important body functions. When we are able to detect such a poisonous protein and remove it from the patients diet or surroundings, the effect is as spectacular as the wave of a fairy's wand.

It was early observed that when protein materials were placed upon the skin a marked redding would appear in some cases. When this occurred we said that the skin was sensitive to the particular protein used. Years of experience with skin tests for protein sensitivity have shown that the results are far from conclusive.

One observer called attention to the existence of eczema in children caused by the eating of eggs, whereas the skin of these same children did not react in the slightest degree to egg protein. Another investigator showed that in a long series of positive tests the substances causing the skin reactions had nothing whatsoever to do with the asthmatic symptoms of which the patients complained. We must assume, therefore, that many of the positive tests and certain of the negative reactions are worthless as indicating specific protein sensitivity.

Colmes, in a recent report, attempts to estimate the value of positive skin reactions on 250 cases of bronchial asthma, 93 of hives (urticaria), and 314 of seasonal hay fever. In the first place, he found that variations in reactions occurred when the same substance was applied to the skin of the same patient at different times. His conclusion is that patients vary in skin sensitivity in the presence of infections, fatigue, constipation and psychic and nutritional disturbances.

In hay fever, however, there was a very close and accurate correlation between the offending pollens and symptoms of the disease. For example, of the 314 patients tested, 310 showed reactions of positive value in treatment. The conclusion seems obvious that in those patients who suffer from hay fever, careful skin testing will detect the offending pollen.

According to Colmes, in about 40 per cent of protein sensitive patients the causative factor can be determined through the employment of skin tests. This means that in diagnosis the results of skin tests must be evaluated with other factors before arriving at a conclusion. We must look upon the results as straws that indicate the direction of the wind. They furnish the highest percentage of clews in tracing the relation between the presence of proteins and their symptom - producing properties. There is a sufficiently high percentage of accuracy to justify an increasing use of the method. Students of allergy (protein sensitivity) will no doubt be stimulated in the search for other types of reactions that will be more highly specific than the skin tests.

7 New Cases Of Paralysis Are Reported

Epidemic Now Confined to Area Near North Carolina Line.

Richmond, Va., July 10.—Seven new cases of infantile paralysis were reported to the State health department here today as Dr. I. C. Riggin, health commissioner, conferred with Federal officials in Washington on the outbreak of the disease in the Old Dominion.

Dr. Riggin, expected to return to his office here early tonight, held a conference in the Capital with Dr. Warren Draper, former Virginia health commissioner, who is now an assistant surgeon general in the Health Service.

The seven cases reported today brought the total since June 1 to 83, although it was pointed out that the figure actually would stand at 86, since three cases reported by the Richmond health department had not been formally recorded by State authorities. Of this number 34 have been reported in July. Richmond, which has 15 cases, includes in that number four brought here for treatment, Dr. Brownley Foster, health director for the city, said.

Of the seven cases reported today, four were in Brunswick County alone, one in Petersburg, one in Mecklenburg, and one in James City County.

The disease has spread in Virginia in the area of Route 1, bordering on the North Carolina line, and State health authorities have kept close watch in that section particularly. Instructions also have been issued physicians that all cases of the disease be reported immediately when they are definitely diagnosed.

No Federal health service experts on paralysis have been sent into Virginia, it was reported in Washington this aftrenoon, although three of them are in North Carolina. Officials explained that Federal men are sent into a State only when requests are made for them.

No figures were available at the State health department today on the recovery of those afflicted. Health department officials here have pointed out that "about half" of the cases are reported as severe, with some of them mild.

Cases Down to 109 Carolina Contagious

By the Associated Press.

Raleigh, N. C., July 10.—Dr. Carl V. Reynolds, State health officer, said this afternoon that only 109 cases of infantile paralysis in North Carolina were still in the contagious stage though 338 had been reported this year.

"Poliomyelitis is no longer infectious three weeks after its onset," Dr. Reynolds said. "Therefore, many of the cases we have heard of since the first of the year are no longer dangerous to the public. This, I believe, should materially reduce the fear of the outbreak in the State."

There were eight new cases listed today.

Aid of U. S. Doctors Promised to Virginia

By the Associated Press.

With infantile paralysis on the increase in Virginia, State Health Commissioner I. C. Riggin talked over the situation yesterday with Surgeon General Cummings, who assured him that if and when Virginia needed the aid of Federal health experts in combating the disease they would be available.

Since the first of May, 7 cases have been reported in Brunswick County, 1 in Charlotte, 1 in Chesterfield, 5 in Dinwiddie, 2 in Greenville, 12 in Halifax, 2 in Henrico, 11 in Lunenburg, 8 in Mecklenberg, 2 in Nansemond, 1 in Nelson, 3 in Nottoway, 2 in Pittsylvania, 1 in Roanoke County, 1 in Tazewell, 1 in Sussex, 1 in Stafford, 1 in King George, 1 in James City, 1 in Grayson, 1 in Caroline, 1 in Bath, 1 in Alleghany, 1 in Accomac, 2 in Danville, 1 in Norfolk, 9 in Richmond City, 1 in Petersburg, and 3 in Lynchburg.

Lack of Crime Wave Allows Jury Vacation

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—Lack of sufficient important cases prompted Judge Frank G. Wagaman today to call off the scheduled grand jury session next week.

If criminal cases of sufficient importance develop within the next nine weeks the two juries can be called for Monday, September 16. Otherwise, no session will be held until regular November term.

Old Dominion Feels Effects Of Truck 'War'

Few 'For Hire' Operators From West Virginia Purchase Tags.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 10.—Most West Virginia truck operators seem to be staying home in preference to buying Virginia tags in order to do business in the Old Dominion since a reciprocal agreement between the two States lapsed on July 1, officials of the motor vehicles division said today.

A few "for hire" operations in the neighboring State have purchased licenses, but Virginia officials said the number was not large and the revenue received was almost negligible. They said actual figures were not available because the West Virginia purchases were not segregated in the records.

A great many requests for information about the Virginia requirements have been received from West Virginia, it was said. John Q. Rhodes, director of the vehicles bureau, has issued orders for trucks from that State without Virginia tags to be held until a license is bought, but that no arrests be made.

A West Virginia law that became effective July 1 requires both permits and licenses to be purchased by "foreign" trucks entering that State. That automatically ended a reciprocity agreement between the two States, as the Virginia law prohibits such agreements with States collecting more charges from Virginia operators than this State assesses.

Officials here said they thought the West Virginia law was aimed at Ohio, with whom West Virginia had been in dispute over truck traffic, but it was found when the act became effective it affected other neighboring States as well.

Plea to State Planned To Halt Truck War

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 10.—Unless there is an adjustment of the truck "war" between West Virginia and adjoining States in the meantime, the West Virginia Motor Truck Association at its annual convention here August 3 will be asked by W. B. Crawley, of Clarksburg, its president, to take action urging the State authorities to come to an early solution of the problem.

Crawley is engaged in a Statewide tour to collect the views of owners and drivers of trucks with the intention of presenting them to James P. Tierney, supervisor of transportation, and other State officials, looking to lifting license restrictions.

Volunteer Blood Donor Saves Life of Boy, 11

A volunteer blood donor probably saved the life of 11-year-old Robert Jones yesterday when physicians of Homeopathic Hospital transfused nearly a pint of blood into Bobby's body.

The youth fell from a mule near his home, in Louisa, Va., Friday. After the arm was treated infection set in and it had to be amputated Tuesday.

His condition became so grave after the operation that the hospital sent out a call for blood.

After the transfusion the boy's condition was said to be improved, but still critical.

4 Waterway Projects Approved in St. Mary's

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., July 10.—Of 30 waterway improvement projects submitted by Maryland and approved by Congress, four have been authorized for St. Mary's County.

Lake Connoy, at Point Lookout, will have an opening large enough to admit yachts for anchorage in case of storms; St. Jerome's Creek will be widened where it flows into the Potomac River; a channel will be made between Chaptico wharf and Budd's landing on the Wicomico, and the St. Mary's River channel will be deepened.

Maryland U. Board Names Skinner Head

Regents Pick Secretary to Succeed Shriver as Chairman.

Byrd Chosen as Acting President, in Field to Replace Pearson.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 10.—The University of Maryland board of regents, meeting in executive session here today, named Dr. W. W. Skinner, its secretary for 18 years, to succeed George M. Shriver as chairman of the board.

At the same time the regents announced H. C. Byrd, vice president of the university, had been formally named as acting president and would be a candidate for the presidency when the board begins its search for a successor to Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, resigned.

Holds U. S. Post.

Dr. Skinner, who has been a member of the board 19 years, is assistant chief of the Bureau of Chemistry and Soils of the United States Department of Agriculture. His home is at Kensington, in Montgomery County.

Former Chairman Shriver submitted his resignation to Gov. Harry W. Nice June 29, the day after the regents asked Dr. Pearson to resign as the university's president. The board had not met since that date.

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, only woman member of the board, was elected to succeed Dr. Skinner as secretary. Dr. Skinner's term expires in 1936. Mrs. Whitehurst was appointed in 1933.

The State board of agriculture is identical with the board of regents and the new chairman therefore will head both bodies. The president of the university serves as executive director of the State board.

To Name Committee.

Mrs. Whitehurst, speaking for the board in her new capacity, said Dr. Skinner will announce soon the names of a committee of three to seek a successor to Dr. Pearson.

As yet, she said, the board has not considered the list of applications.

Gov. Nice has yet to name an appointee who will fill the vacancy left by Shriver's resignation. Appointment to the board is for nine years.

Grove Company To Stop Operations

Road Organization Sets Furlough for 200.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., July 10.—Two hundred road workers of the M. J. Grove Lime Co. will be indefinitely furloughed Saturday, William J. Grove, president, said today. Some of the men have worked continuously for the company for 20 years and are expert road builders. The furlough affects the entire road organization of the company and will necessitate the withdrawal of all road equipment.

Grove said Saturday will mark the completion of the company's State road contracts and no other work was in sight. It will be the first time since the company organized 30 years ago that the road organization will close down. The company has constructed improved highways all over the State. Grove said lack of State funds to build roads is responsible for the furlough and it is doubtful if the workers will be recalled until the $4,800,000,000 relief work program of the Federal Government gets under way.

Fifty track repair workers of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at Brunswick furloughed ten days ago were recalled today. The men resumed work under G. F. Bissett, car foreman.

Delegates met in instructional groups during the afternoon and were to return to their stations today after a final meeting.

City Power Profits Rise.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—Although the municipal electric light plant operated by this city returned the largest profit in its history last year, the increase in business during the first six months of 1935 indicates an even greater profit. R. R. Daniels, superintendent, reported an increase of 481,000 kilowatts for the first half of 1935 over the corresponding period of 1934.

Virginia Board Changes Plan On Farm Check

Koiner to Supervise on Inspection of Fruits and Vegetables.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., July 10.—An important change in the inspection of Virginia fruits and vegetables, particularly apples, was authorized by the State board of agriculture at a meeting here today, when Commissioner George W. Koiner was directed to designate a supervisor for this service.

Heretofore inspectors under the market bureau of the State agriculture department checked the production and packing of apples, but criticism was heard from several large growers of the personnel and methods of inspection.

Commissioner Koiner is expected to appoint a supervisor soon in compliance with a resolution adopted by the board. The appointee will be attached to the market bureau.

Wheat prices were discussed at the meeting, but no official action was taken. After the session, Mr. Koiner said the Virginia wheat market was strengthening, local quotations being only about 11 cents under the Chicago market. Virginia millers announced several weeks ago they would be forced by competition from the Pacific Northwest to pay 20 or 25 cents less than Chicago quotations for local wheat.

W. W. Sproul, of Augusta, was reelected chairman of the board and L. T. Berry, assistant commissioner, was reelected secretary.

P.-T.A. Prods Gov. Nice for School Fund

State Conclave Reminds Him of Promise to Aid System.

Mrs. Coppage Declares Teachers Are Entitled to Former Pay.

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., July 10.—A resolution reminding Gov. Harry W. Nice of "his promise to use his vote on the board of public works to make a 'substantial restoration' of funds to the school system of Maryland" was passed today by the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The resolution was put to vote by Mrs. A. G. Clements, of the legislative committee, and was passed unanimously. Copies were ordered sent to the State comptroller and the State treasurer.

In an address during the morning session at the University of Maryland, Mrs. Clements urged passage of the resolution as a "courteous reminder" of his promise, said to have been made in a letter last March to Reginald C. Lamb, chairman of the congress legislative committee.

Pay Restoration Sought.

Mrs. H. Ross Coppage, president of the congress, called for an immediate vote on the proposed resolution when the meeting reconvened after the luncheon recess.

Mrs. Clements said teachers accepted "without complaint" salary cuts of 10 per cent in 1933-34 and 11 per cent in 1934-35" as their contribution toward meeting the difficulty with which citizens were confronted as a result of the depression."

Also, she asserted, the teachers undertook instruction of larger classes under the reduced pay program.

"Now that the cost of living has increased," she said, "and partial recovery is definitely on the way, it seems only reasonable that there should be for teachers at least a partial restoration of salaries."

FERA Nursery Schools.

Miss Edna McNaughton, of the home economics faculty of the university, led a discussion of FERA nursery schools later in the program, followed by a discussion of field day programs led by Miss Nora Crossman, of the Playground Athletic League.

Mrs. Milton Moore, second vice president of the congress, will preside at tomorrow morning's session. From 9:30 a. m. until noon, Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, first vice president of the National P.-T. Congress, will direct a study group titled "Conference Members Go to School."

The discussion will consider four phases of school work—study, recitation, examination, and graduation.

During the afternoon, Dr. J. H. Mason Knox, of the State health department, will speak. A reception will be held at 4 p. m.

3 Waynesboro Schools Undergoing Remodeling

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., July 10.—Three of the oldest school buildings of the Waynesboro district are being modernized prior to the opening of school in September. Work on the Snider avenue grade building was started yesterday, and according to School Supt. D. J. Keener, similar work will be done on the Clayton avenue and North street grade buildings.

The improvements consist chiefly of new lighting costing more than $1,800.

Japanese Beetles Gain.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—A heavy infestation of Japanese beetles has been reported in the western section of this city and forces of the beetle control unit have been kept busy the last week in an effort to prevent spread to other sections of the city. The first beetles were brought into the city several years ago on shrubbery from New Jersey.

Government Plans $2 Tax On Illicit Virginia Liquor

Treasury Officials Here Plan New Move in Conspiracy Case.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., July 10.—A move to collect $2 a gallon internal revenue tax on every gallon of liquor illicitly distilled in Franklin County was indicated today by Treasury officials at Washington as attorneys for 16 convicted defendants in the prolonged liquor conspiracy trial prepared appeals.

Reports used in the trial will be taken as the basis of collections, it was learned, with a resort to "the routine civil route" if difficulties are encountered in collecting the back levies.

Only one of the 20 men convicted, and sentenced yesterday by Judge John Paul, has begun serving his term. C. P. Griffith, of Ferrum, is in the Floyd County Jail to begin his four-month sentence.

Bonds of the 16 appealing and three who have not filed intention to appeal have been continued to September 3.

Thirteen grounds for the appeals were cited by eight attorneys who served notices on prosecutors in the trial. Attorneys have until November 1 to file their bill of exceptions.

Gaming War Planned If Racing Is Banned

By the Associated Press.

Virginia Beach, Va., July 10. Told that Gov. George C. Peery is investigating reports of dog race betting at Virginia Beach, a source close to the management of the dog track said today all forms of gambling at the resort would be attacked in retaliation if racing were ruled illegal.

He referred to "wide open" gambling in the concessions where cash is wagered by the public on wheels, dice, and slot machines.

5 Eastern Shore Counties Levy Higher Taxes

Old Age Pensions Chief Reason; Other Two Keep Same Rate.

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., July 10.—A survey of seven Eastern Shore counties shows that five of them increased their tax levies for the coming year by amounts ranging from 10 cents to 37 cents on the $100 valuation while the other two held the rate at the old level.

Chief reasons for the increases were levies for old-age pensions, money for schools and increased debt service requirements. Worcester held its rate at 95 cents per $100 and Talbot held its rate at 85 cents.

The amounts levied for old-age pensions by the seven counties are Queen Annes, $10,000; Wicomico, $20,000; Worcester, $10,000; Talbot, $5,000; Caroline, $4,000; Kent, $3,000, and Somerset, $4,000.

Kent County increased its rate by 37 cents per $100. Somerset's rate was increased from 98 cents to $1.20; Caroline's from 98 cents to $1.08, Queen Annes from 78 cents to $1, and Wicomico from 88 cents to $1.06.

La Plata, Md., July 10 (AP).—Charles County's tax has been boosted 15 cents in the 1935 levy approved by the county commissioners. The new rate is $1.15 on the $100, the added amount to be used for school construction, old-age pension payments, child welfare and repairs to county buildings.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—Elmer B. Carl, recently named superintendent of the State Penal Farm at Roxbury, succeeding Hal T. 90% Corn Crop Forecast.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., July 10.—With continued favorable weather, a 90 per cent corn crop was forecast for Washington County by J. A. Miller, United States Department of Agriculture reporter for this district. Rains during the last week have been helpful to both corn and late potatoes.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 10.—The Rev. Nathan R. Melhorn, of Philadelphia, editor of the Lutheran, will be the principal speaker at the fourteenth annual reunion of Lutherans at Pen Mar, Thursday, July 18. The Rev. S. L. Hench, Dallaston, Pa., president of West Pennsylvania Synod, will preside.

Potato Raisers Request Bland Help on Control

375 Aver Warren Bill Needed to End Desperate Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

Painter, Va., July 10.—Three hundred and seventy-five striking potato growers of Virginia's Eastern Shore today signed and dispatched to Representative Otis Bland, of Virginia, a telegram demanding that the Warren potato control bill be passed by Congress to deliver them from "desperate circumstances."

The bill, which would classify potatoes as a basic commodity and authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to establish sales quotas, received the House Agricultural Committee's favorable report by a 13-to-11 vote today. The growers did not know of this action when they sent their wire to Bland, their Representative.

Upwards of 1,000 growers, in an assembly here last night, agreed to join hands with potato farmers of Worcester and Somerset Counties, in Maryland, to carry the fight "to a finish."

J. Miles Lankford, chairman of the Maryland committee, as well as 12 dealers, attended the rally here.

The strikers adopted a resolution calling upon Eastern Shore farmers to petition the United States Secretary of Agriculture for a special allotment from funds set aside for growing cotton and tobacco. Declaring that "our soil is adapted to the growing of these two crops," they said, "if we can not get potato legislation, we shall grow crops which are protected by the administration."

Police Probe Co-ed Death At Baltimore

Johns Hopkins Student Succumbs After Drinking Poison.

Professor's Daughter Is Found Wandering on Campus.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 10.—Baltimore police today launched an inquiry into the death of a 22-year-old Johns Hopkins summer school co-ed who died today at Union Memorial Hospital, where she had been receiving treatment for poisoning.

The young woman, Miss Isabelle Hegner, was taken to the hospital late yesterday by John Swan, a gardener, who found her wandering about the campus, barefooted and with her clothes soaking wet.

Swan told Patrolman Raymond Tarr that Miss Hegner said she was a university student, had taken poison and wanted hospital treatment. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Hegner. Her father is professor of protozoology at the Johns Hopkins University school of hygiene and public health and at present is on a vacation in Mexico.

Police searched the campus and found the young woman's purse, which contained $20, her slippers, eyeglasses, and some other articles on the bank of a small pond there.

Truckmen Given Police Protection

Drivers Report Attacks; Hijacking Feared.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., July 10.—State police and Carroll County officers were called out early today to escort two large trucks, whose drivers were thought to have been the intended victims of hijackers or striking members of another trucking company.

According to William Potter, of York, Pa., and Ralph Sheaffer, Harrisburg, Pa., drivers for the Motor Freight Express, of York, a rock was thrown through the windshield of the truck driven by Sheaffer before he crossed the Maryland line early this morning.

The drivers said that they saw a coupe parked on a side road, and after leaving Manchester, Md., a similar coupe with its license plates covered with rags, passed them. Both drivers stated that there were two persons riding in the rumble seat of the coupe, their heads covered with a blanket. Stopping at Hampstead, Md., the drivers notified the Maryland State Police.

The Newly Formed Fox-Twentieth Century Alliance Announces Its First Films

Eight 'Super' Pictures Will Be Shown Here

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

It is the erudite and itinerant Mr. Carter Tate Barron, division manager of the Loew theaters in this territory, who makes known the identities of the first eight pictures to be released under the old, familiar description of "super" productions by the newly allied Fox and Twentieth Century companies. All of these releases, needless to say, will be seen first upon the screen of some one or another of the Loew houses that drape themselves along the south side of F street between Fourteenth and Eleventh, or vice versa, depending upon which way you are headed.

It is made plain in Mr. Barron's statement that this first group of eight does not by any means represent the sum total of the Fox-Twentieth Century output for the year. They are only a beginning. And as that eminent announcer, Bill Hay, would say, here they are:

More Opera on Screen.

"Metropolitan," a story of the home of grand opera of that name, in which Lawrence Tibbett, ranking American barytone, will be the pictured star, under the direction of Richard Boleslavsky, the man who made "Les Miserables." The story is an original by Bess Meredyth and George Marion, jr., in the course of which Mr. Tibbett will rather out-Moore Grace herself by singing the "Toreador Song" from "Carmen," "On the Road to Mandalay," the prologue to "Pagliacci," selections from "The Barber of Seville" and the "Vesti la Giubba" aria, also from "Pagliacci."

"The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo"—a picture which practically breaks the record for length of title—starring Ronald Colman, adapted from the Russian by Nunnally Johnston and directed by John Ford.

Story of Cuban War.

"Message to Garcia," based on the story by the late Elbert Hubbard and the book by Gen. Rowan, the man who carried the message to Garcia.

"Earthbound," by Basil King.

"Snatched," by Kubec Glassman, author of "Public Enemy."

"Shark Island," based on the life of Dr. Samuel Mudd, the man who gave unintentional asylum to John Wilkes Booth the night he assassinated President Lincoln in Ford's Opera House. It is interesting to recall that Mudd was sacrificed on the altar of mob rule. Only recently, however, President Roosevelt dedicated Shark Island to his memory and rechristened it Fort Mudd.

"John Barleycorn," a picturization of the dire consequences of the evils of the demon rum, by Jack London.

These, then, are the first of the crop from the merged forces of Sidney Kent and Darryl Zanuck. By every evidence of past history and experience, they ought to be good.

An anonymous correspondent—an ilk to which it is one of the fundamentals of journalism to pay no attention—calls attention to the fact that the whole point of the final scene of "She," the fantastic picture now on the screen at RKO-Keith's, was muffed by this department in its review of the Sir Rider Haggard subject. It is pointed out that there is a sound belief at the bottom of "She's" failure to profit by the "flame of perpetual life" in the closing scene of the film. This may well be. There are a tremendous number of doctrines, precepts and theories that might be invoked to justify the hideous spectacle that the climax of the picture presents. None of these, however, would be sufficient to set aside the fact that "She," in the large view, is a splendid piece of imaginative hokum. It gives way, on Friday, to the picturization of Poe's "The Raven," with Boris "Frankenstein" Karloff and Bela "Dracula" Lugosi in the co-stellar roles. This might turn out to be a bit of a hair-raiser, too, just in case you are in need of a little hair-raising.

Another Talent Quest.

Those public auditions recently held on the stage of the National Theater for the purpose of securing principals for the third annual all-Washington revue, "Going Native," to be staged at Loew's Fox in August, did not mark the cessation of active opportunities for Washington artists to establish themselves as potential stars of stage, screen and radio. Further vistas are opening before aspiring performers of the National Capital, with practically no restrictions upon the character of the specialty pursued.

An announcement from Tom Moore and Associates which reached the drama desks late yesterday afternoon is to the effect that beginning next Monday, July 15, the organization newly returned to Washington as a base of its professional activities will be prepared to receive applications for auditions of artists, both amateur and professional, who may wish to take advantage of an opportunity to be on the roster of the Rialto Players.

The Rialto Players will be, in effect, a reservoir of talent upon which to draw for principals in stage, screen and radio productions to be originated in and distributed from the Capital under the managing directorship of Tom Moore, owner of the Rialto Theater and pioneer in the local picture field.

May Enroll in Four Groups.

The applications will be received and classified under four group headings, covering the major productional activities the company will undertake. Entrants found to possess ability in more than one of the classifications will be listed in as many groups as his or her capabilities seem to warrant. That is to say, it is not impossible for the same specialist to be catalogued as available for stage, screen and radio work.

A stage director and casting director will arrive in Washington from New York in August. The auditions beginning next Monday are planned to supply a list of names that may be called upon immediately upon the arrival here of the directors, who will have the business of selecting and casting principals directly under their control.

All those wishing to apply for auditions should address the Rialto Players, Rialto Theater, Ninth and G streets northwest, Washington, D. C., or call in person between the hours of 10 a. m. and 12 noon or between 2 and 5 p. m., Monday to Friday, both inclusive, when Miss Jane Slater will be in attendance to give audiences and receive applications.

Jupiter Pluvius, the weather man, and other arbiters of the feeble plans of mice and men being acquiescent, tonight will witness the presentation of Master Will Shakespeare's fantasy of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in the Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, under the auspices of the Washington Community Players. The fairy play will be presented without intermission, but will be preceded by a half-hour of music by the U. S. Army Band, beginning at 7:45 o'clock.

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" met with tremendous popular success when presented under the same auspices in the same place last summer. It is being reenacted tonight by virtually the same cast that scored so decisively on the previous occasion—even down to "Ugly," the dog actor owned by a member of the Park Police Force, which has no unimportant place among the dramatic personnae. Tickets are available at the A. A. A. ticket bureau, the Willard and Washington hotels and will be on sale at the Sylvan Theater at 7 o'clock tonight and thereafter until time of the performance.

"Becky" Deemed Best.

The monthly brochure emanating from the office of the Will H. Hays organization, setting forth the screen selections of a national group of motion-picture preview committees, just to hand, nominates "Becky Sharp" as the "best picture of the month" preceding July 1.

This, it seems to me, is a worthy award. "Becky Sharp" was no great shakes as drama possessing the tang of newness and novelty, but it did afford a splendid subject for a concrete demonstration of the vast possibilities of natural-color photography, as developed in the newly perfected, three-tone Technicolor process. There were defects even in the color photography, but they were so far outnumbered by its conspicuous advantages as not to count in any serious recapitulation of the picture's probable influence on the future of the film industry.

G-Men Lauded.

Also coming in for a wholehearted boost in the pamphlet is "Let 'Em Have It," United Artists' contribution to the gallery of screen subjects dedicated to the prowess of the Department of Justice's bureau of crime investigation in running down public enemies.

This is a matter of especial gratification to this column, because it has always looked upon "Let 'em Have It" as the best of the gangster films subjected to the new approach. It lacks nothing of excitement, suspense and dramatic action, the while it presents the clearest and most interesting exposition of the actual workings of the Department of Justice that have found their way to the screen—Harry Evans and numerous others of the type-writer boys and girls to the contrary, notwithstanding.

"Let 'em Have It," to this observation post, is "inferior" to some of the other G-men exhibits only in its aloofness from hokum and gunfire as essential elements of sound drama.

Beginning on Friday of this week, and on that day only, bus service will be put in force between Washington and the Roadside Theater, out the Rockville pike, four miles beyond Bethesda, Md. A Capital Transit Co. bus will leave Dupont Circle every Friday night hereafter at 8 p. m., arriving at the Roadside Theater in ample time for the first curtain. The bus will follow the Massachusetts avenue extended, Wisconsin avenue route and will make no stops between Dupont Circle and the theater. It will remain at the Roadside until after the play and then return its passengers to Washington. This will be in addition to the regular street car and bus services, which are not scheduled precisely as they should be to serve the best interests of potential audiences at the Capital's only "barn" theater.

The round trip by bus will be 40 cents. With many excellent seats at the Roadside—there are no poor ones in the theater—priced at 55 cents, this new transportation arrangement will keep the cost of Roadside attendance under $1 per person. For any further information, phone the theater at Cleveland 4256.

Miss Ferber Again.

Samuel Goldwyn has announced the purchase of Edna Ferber's best-seller, "Come and Get It," as a starring vehicle for Miriam Hopkins, whose stock has risen tremendously since her splendid performance in the title role of "Becky Sharp."

Under the terms of her contract with Goldwyn, Miss Ferber will receive the highest price ever paid a film writer for a single script. She will inaugurate a new method of screen adaptation by "talking" the entire motion picture version of her story to another writer. Edward Chodorov, author of the stage play, "Kind Lady," now a Goldwyn staff writer, will be Miss Ferber's technical assistant in this unique scheme of collaboration.

"Come and Get It," the newest of the Ferber fictions to reach the screen, takes for its theme the growth and disintegration of a great lumber enterprise, from the turn of the nineteenth century to the present. It will provide Miss Hopkins with a stellar role unlike any which she has heretofore essayed.

The picture, when completed, will be a United Artists release.

When Leo Carrillo comes to the stage of Warner Brothers Earle Theater as headliner of the vaudeville bill for the week beginning August 2, it will be his third visit to the Capital in the last three years. It will be recalled that he was one of the stars aboard the "Forty-Second Street Special" that parked in Washington the morning of President Roosevelt's inauguration. He appeared the next night in Daniel Frohman's Actors' Fund Benefit at the Belasco Theater, along with William Faversham, Noel Coward and Beatrice Lillie, Frances Starr, Montagu Love, the Duncan Sisters, Cecelia Loftus, Fannie Ward and a host of others. A year ago this month, the facile Mr. Carrillo appeared again at the Earle as headliner of the stage bill. Beginning Friday he will be seen "stealing the show" from Grace Moore in "Love Me Forever," the chief feature of the film program at the Earle. The man can act—as has been remarked here before, these past coupla days.

Silver Lining Note.

Yes, sure it was hot yistiddy, but, don't forget, you might have been born an asphalt pavement layer-downer or maybe a stoker on a steamship!

Her Acting Won Long Contract

The excellence of her work in the Ben Hecht-Charles MacArthur picture, "The Scoundrel," starring Noel Coward, won Julie Haydon, pictured above, a long-term contract with Paramount, the company that distributes the Hecht-MacArthur Long Island product—or is it Brooklyn? At any rate, "The Scoundrel," concerning which so many local picturegoers have inquired, will be seen as the major screen feature at Loew's Palace Theater following the current engagement of William Powell and Luise Rainer in "Escapade."

Report Informs Peery Of Crowding in Prison

Richmond, Va., July 10 (AP).—Gov. Perry had before him today a report on over-crowding at the State penitentiary here, which may influence him in making recommendations to the next general assembly.

The report was offered by members of the State Prison Board, who called on the executive yesterday. They told him the prison, originally designed to house 800 prisoners, now has 1,106, although the budget allowance provides for only 900. If the number of prisoners continues to increase, the board told the Governor, either larger quarters or the institution of a parole system will be necessary.

Movie Boners.

Hollywood, July 10.

THE Movie Boners' Club goes into session again with new members and new flicker flaws. The script gals are being more attentive and more careful, but the flicker without a boner has yet to be produced. Of all the fine pictures produced recently, there is not one candidate for the perfect picture prize.

Up for membership is Selwyn Levine, who saw Joe E. Brown in "Alibi Ike," and claims that in the sequence when the Cubs are playing a night game of baseball with the Cardinals, a player crosses the plate with a run, and the radio announcer, who is broadcasting the game, shouts that the Giants have scored a run.

Why, they weren't even playing, says Levine. This may not be a movie boner. It may be a true portrayal of a radio announcer. If he broadcast the game correctly, then it would be a boner.

• • • •

While watching "The Age of Indiscretion," Movie Fan Rose Heller paid as much attention to Madge Evans as Tom Gallery does. In the flicker, Miss Evans is playing a character named Nancy Bennett, and if an author wants to call Madge Evans that it is all right with Rose Heller, but there is one sequence in which Miss Evans wears a blouse. On the blouse are the metal initials, M. E. From this it is evident that Madge Evans was wearing her own apparel and was not supplied with a wardrobe by the Metro designer, Adrian.

• • • •

MANY fans wrote in, saying that in "Naughty Marietta," Jeanette MacDonald wrote with a fountain pen and that this was a boner, for the action of the flicker took place before fountain pens came into use. Harry Albieg, who is property man for Director W. S. Van Dyke on all his pictures, and who supplied the props for this one, would like it known that Miss MacDonald didn't use a fountain pen.

Albieg says: "I knew that there weren't any fountain pens then. I did plenty of checking. Miss MacDonald wrote with a charcoal stick in that scene, and I went to plenty of trouble to select the correct charcoal stick, so I wish you'd correct the boner. Say, it isn't my fault if a piece of charcoal photographs like a fountain pen."

Director Van Dyke says that Albieg is correct, but adds: "There's a movie boner in 'Naughty Marietta' which no one noticed. I'm surprised no one saw it. Miss MacDonald is sailing to America on a French boat, and if you watch closely in the long shot you will see that it is flying the British Union Jack." It's nice to have a director tell you a boner in his own flicker.

• • • •

Actresses must appear modern even when playing in period pictures, for they believe that their public wants them to be beautiful, regardless of the story. Therefore, actresses often appear made up in a manner unheard of in the period they are supposed to be portraying. Fans, however, notice such trivials. Margaret Bonsall objects because when Gloria Shea in "Laddie" was preparing a list of invitations, it was plainly seen that Miss Shea's fingernails were brightly polished and very pointed, despite the fact that the action of the flicker takes place about the time of the Civil War.

• • • •

GEORGE RAFT in "The Glass Key," sends Tammany Young out to buy Edward Arnold a pair of socks. Then Raft looks out of the window, goes to the telephone, calls a bookie and places a bet on a horse. Raft explains to Arnold that it is raining very heavily outside, therefore, the track will be muddy tomorrow and the horse will be a cinch. It is after this scene that Tammany Young returns and Martin Levinson claims a flicker flaw, for Tammany comes into the room and neither his hat nor his suit shows evidence of the fact that he was out in the heavy rain which Raft saw and spoke about.

In "Les Miserables," Fredric March holds a bucket of water for his horse to drink. Raymond Gould, who insists he is a horse fancier and knows all about horses, says that he's certain the horse wasn't drinking water out of that bucket, but was eating oats instead. He says he knows the difference between drinking and eating, and that this was one horse they couldn't even lead to water.

• • • •

Every gesture of Noel Coward was watched very closely in "The Scoundrel." A movie fan claimed a movie boner because of Coward's entrance scene. When he hastily put on a pair of trousers, Noel only buttoned the first button on the trousers. Now, Frank Calley insists that this was no flicker flaw. He says that Coward's trousers didn't have buttons; that Coward, very swank, was wearing the latest style in pants, and that they had a zipper. The fans watch every gesture.

'Social Medicine' Faces Prosecution

W. Va. Council Hits Firms Retaining Physicians.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 10.—Corporations which employ physicians to take care of their sick employes and collect funds from which to pay the doctors will be prosecuted in the courts "as fast as evidence can be collected," it was revealed at the summer session of the State public health council here.

The council went on record as opposed to socialized medicine as allegedly practiced by several corporations in the State, ruling that "corporations which collect funds from employes, pay the doctor a small salary and turn the balance over to corporation profits, truly violate the State medical practice statutes by practicing medicine for profit without license or qualification."

Twenty-four applicants for doctor's certificate took the examination, but results will not be announced for ten days. The members of the council visited the Hopemont State Sanitarium at Terra Alta.

Other members selected are Noble Rushe, of Hyattsville; Jesse Fisher, of Annapolis; Phillip C. Sterling, of Cambridge, and Edward O. Diffendal, of Westminster.

Staunton Gives Students Free Play of Hobbies

Many Extra Curricular Activities Open to Post Contest Winner.

Reversing the old axiom, "Be good and you will be happy," that sage English novelist of the last century, Samuel Butler, envisioned the trend of modern education when he said "Be happy and you will be good."

The kind of happiness that leads to beneficial results is provided by extra-curricular activities at Staunton Military Academy, where The Washington Post is offering a two-year scholarship next fall. A boy's hobby, properly supervised, may guide him into a happy choice of vocation. It is worth while if it bears no direct results other than to teach him how to occupy leisure hours. And whatever his hobby, Staunton helps him to profit from it to the fullest.

Varied Leisure Activities.

Membership in the Blue Knights, the academy orchestra, will appeal to the boy of musical bent. Instruction in dancing is available, and prepares the student to enjoy the dances given by the Cotillion Club.

The Woodrow Wilson Literary Society, the Debating Club and the Public Speaking Club provide opportunity for the more serious-minded student to develop his wits. The Y. M. C. A. and Bible Clubs, supervised by the school chaplain, are popular and influential phases in academy life.

The boy who is talented in dramatics may join the Black Friars, which presents several plays each year and the bi-weekly Kablegram is written, edited and managed by students interested in journalism.

Hobbies also are encouraged through the stamp, chess, bird, radio and foreign language clubs, so that whatever his interests, the Staunton boy will find a satisfactory outlet for them.

Entry Requirements.

Such education supplements the required courses, and all the benefits offered by two years at Staunton will be provided without cost to the winner of The Post scholarship contest.

Any Washington boy who is the son of a veteran of the World War, and who will be ready for the third year of high school in the fall, is eligible. Not only his tuition but his board and uniforms will be provided, so the winner will enjoy the advantage of an education as fine as any secondary school in the country can provide at less expense to his family than it would cost to live at home.

Enrollment in the contest is still open, as the essay on "Why I Would Like to Go to Staunton," required of each contestant, need not be submitted until August 1. Application blanks may be obtained by writing Alice Fox Pitts, Staunton contest director, in care of The Washington Post. A week's vacation at Camp Calvert, on the shore of Breton Bay, will be awarded as second prize in the contest.

Fire Blamed on Lightning.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., July 10.—Damage caused by fire, believed to have been started by lightning early today in a barn on the dairy farm of Lloyd Eicher, of Bealton, has been estimated at $1,500. Prompt arrival of the Warrenton Fire Department was said to have prevented the flames from spreading to several nearby buildings.

With Shirley Povich

FRED MARBERRY may or may not be a great umpire, but the reformed pitcher has brought a sense of humor into the profession which apparently puts a premium on stiffness, testiness and general all-round thin-skinned demeanor.

POVICH.

The former Washington pitching idol was saying yesterday that he liked the work, the hours and the pay, and allowed as how he figured he'd make a pretty good umpire as soon as he got the hang of things.

"You know," he said, "when I was out there pitching, I was pretty good at calling 'em. Now that I'm giving all my time to this umpiring business, I ought to make a success of it."

Marberry isn't working behind the plate, yet. Tom Connolly, from the league's office in Chicago, has arranged his schedule so that he will always be working with a pair of veteran umps, but at the rate Marberry is winning favor he's due for a turn behind the bat within a few weeks.

One of the items that is keeping Marberry from working behind the plate is the fact that he has been unable to find any equipment large enough to fit him. Shin guards, ankle guards and breast protectors that he has tried have all been too small. It seems that Marberry is an out size as far as umpires' paraphernalia is concerned. But the factory is rushing the stuff along.

HIZZONER BILL McGOWAN, now a Washington native and one of the most esteemed of all the big league umpires, yesterday paid a fine tribute to Marberry's umpiring thus far. I give you McGowan:

"It has been nice working with Fred. Bill Summers and I have had him ever since he broke into the game ten days ago and the only thing he needs is experience. He has everything else—the right temperament, nice judgment, a keen eye and a burning eagerness to learn. Why, he's studying that rule book every night after the gall game. It's serious business with him.

"Marberry has a great start in this umpiring business. I mean his size and personality. He makes the best personal appearance of any umpire I've ever seen, and if you don't think that helps, all you have to do is ask some of these short, fat fellows who have two strikes on them with the crowd from the moment they step out there.

"Marberry breathes authority with those 6 feet 2 inches and his 225 pounds. When he gives a decision it ought to stick. A fellow isn't going to try to browbeat or bully him on a trifling decision. Ordinarily it takes six or seven years to develop an umpire, but Fred looks like a natural. His chief lack right now is a bit of indecision on some of the plays, but he'll get over that."

McGowan yesterday revealed that an umpire behind the plate, calling balls, strikes, foul tips and plays at home, makes 350 decisions during an average game. He admits that a plate umpire will average three mistakes a game, and submits that that isn't a bad average at all.

In Short.

The Washington and Detroit players showed a fine spirit of camaraderie where Fred Marberry's decisions at first base were concerned yesterday, never raising a squawk . . . although several appeared as if they wanted to . . . and then again, the Nats had such a big league in the early innings and the Tigers were so far out of it, his decisions didn't loom important . . . Mayor O'Keefe, of Biloxi, and Anthony Ragusin, Biloxi Chamber of Commerce chief, will attend the game today . . . they hold no resentment for the Nats as a result of the training camp shift from Biloxi to Orlando, Fla. . . . Dick Lanahan, the former Eastern High School pitcher, is a sure shot to be recalled by the Nats from Chattanooga at the end of the season . . . he won a 3-to-2 game from Knoxville yesterday and was beaten three days before that in another 3-to-2 game in which the catcher's error permitted two runs . . . two other Chattanooga players to be seen in Orlando with the Nats next spring are Freddie Sington and Ed Remorenko, the big Russian first baseman, who are banging the daylights out of the ball in the Southern Association . . . Ossie Bluege was not selected for the American League all-star team because the league's managers voted for him, but because Mickey Cochrane thinks he is the best all-round infielder in baseball and insisted on his appointment . . . Clark Griffith still thinks the Yankees will beat out the Tigers for the American League pennant . . . and that the Nats are a first-division ball club . . . to which echo answers: "Heh, heh."

Give Owens a Rest, He'll Beat Peacock in the Dash—Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, July 10.—This department has finally seen the famous Jesse Owens run, and wishes to report that he runs very nicely indeed. At the time that I saw him he was not running quite as quickly as another colored boy by the name of Eulace Peacock, but he was not a tenth of a second behind at the little piece of red string that marked the finish line, and it looked to me as though Owens was getting faster as the finish came closer and in another step would have passed and beaten Peacock. However, by that time he had run out of cinder track and the race was over with the Temple star the winner.

I thought the time of 9.7 rather remarkable, considering that the track had been soaked with a downpour, it was still raining, and both men are a little fed-up on competition. Owens particularly is about run out and ought to have a long rest if he is to be of assistance to his country in the forthcoming Olympics next summer.

It is curious how there always seems to be two colored sprinters around to plague one another. Three years or so ago there were Ralph Metcalf and Eddie Tolan. Now it is Owens and Peacock, and between the two seems to lie the Olympic 100-meter, 200-meter and broad-jump victories. Owens, by the way, said that he was tired and away from his best form. A radio announcer asked him to explain over the microphone what he meant by saying that he was not at his best right now. Owens said "I just mean I'm tired. I've been doing a lot of running and I'm tired of it. I mean just like what you've been announcing for a long time, your voice gets tired." That seemed simple enough. He just means that he's tired.

Picks Owens at Best.

If both men were at their best and fresh, I think I should pick Owens to take Peacock in the hundred. Don't know why, particularly because Peacock has a much stronger build and seems to be more powerful all around. But Owens strikes me as more of a greyhound, and capable of a greater nervous effort over the 100-yard stretch. I thought he had some running left in him at the end of the hundred.

It was a miserable evening for an all-star track meet, or any kind of a track meet, for that matter. The A. A. U. ran it in conjunction with New York University at Ohio Field, and every one must have lost plenty of money on it, because traveling expenses and prizes come high, and the downpour kept the crowd down to a handful of soggy spectators sweltering in raincoats and standing beneath umbrellas, real, honest "rack fans that nothing could stop from seeing the two fastest men in the world today. There were also leapers and vaulters and hurdlers and milers and weight men, all very wet and very cross about the whole business. The meet could not be postponed as most of the athletes were sailing for Europe the next day. But at least we all did have a look at Owens.

This being an AAU event, all my AAU friends were there and I found it possible to cadge a red-

Rowe Faces Nats In Second Game

Harris Uses Hadley Today Against Detroit.

In an attempt to regain ground lost to the league-leading Yankees yesterday, Manager Mickey Cochrane will send his No. 1 pitcher, Schoolboy Rowe, to the mound against the Nats in the second game of the current series today.

Bucky Harris will counter with Irving Hadley, whose last effort was his best of the season. On that occasion last Saturday he shut out the Yankees in the final eight innings and achieved a six-hit game after allowing three runs at the start.

Harris has altered his plans for using young Dee Miles regularly in the Nats' outfield against right-handed pitching. The Chattanooga recruit will be allowed to sit on the bench for a few days, familiarize himself with big league tactics and learn the angles of playing the right field fence during fielding practice.

Bokars Want Action.

For a Saturday game with the Bokar All-Stars, of the A. & P. League, call Manager Metcalf at Potomac 1530 between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Detroit Rally Stopped by Newsom

Uprising Is Halted With 5 Runs Over, Tying Score on Second.

Ten Doubles Rattle Off Visitors' Bats; Nats Take Early Lead.

By Shirley Povich,

DETROIT'S ten-game winning streak is no more. The Nats, of all people, put an end to it yesterday, but it was a "lively" corpse that they found on their hands in the ninth inning when the final rites almost took the form of a violent and complete resurrection.

Rigor mortis had apparently set in for Detroit's hopes of extending their streak back in the first inning when the Nats stepped gaily second, the winning run on first, the Nats in jitters and 3,000 fans muttering imprecations against the wastrel Washington pitching staff.

Six runs behind going into the ninth, the Tigers jammed five runs across the plate against three Washington pitchers and accepted defeat only by the score of 12 to 11.

Big Buck Newson finally applied brakes to the Tigers after early indications that he, too, was going the way of all Washington pitching flesh. Earl Whitehill pitched to four batters in that ninth and couldn't get anybody out, and Ed Linke pitched to one and walked him to fill the bases, but let's go back to the beginning of that ninth.

Gehringer Starts Rally.

Charley Gehringer, the first offender, blasted a home run over the right field wall to reduce Whitehill's lead to 12-7, and Whitehill then pitched the Tigers' tenth two-base hit of the ball game to Greenberg. He pitched a single to Goslin and another single to Rogell and the Tigers had another run with two still on base and none out as yet, when Manager Bucky Harris finally deduced that Whitehill was fading.

He called in Ed Linke to pitch against Pinch Hitter Mickey Cochrane and Linke solved the situation by walking Cochrane on five pitches to fill the bases. Whitehill, who was the first man jerked in the inning, then was joined by Linke, the second man out.

After warming up hurriedly in the bull pen, Buck Newsom strode to the mound and lost his smile with the echo of Marvin Owen's single into center that scored the third and fourth Detroit runs of the inning and placed the tying run on first with none out.

Fox Single Scores Another.

Finally the Nats got a Tiger out when Pinch Hitter Shelly flied to Powell and the runners held their bases, but not for long. Along came Pete Fox with a single to center and the Tigers' fifth run of the inning was home, Owens on second with the tying run, and Fox on first with the potential winning run, and only one out.

Then Newsom began to emerge as somewhat of a hero. He disposed of the dangerous Gerald Walker on a foul to Kuhel and Gehringer, who had started all the trouble with his home run, went out mildly on a fly to Schulte in left field to bring matters to a most happy and fortunate conclusion for the Nats.

Whitehill, with the help of a grievous error by Ossie Bluege,

Fred Marberry, in New Role, Calls 'Em Against Former Mates

"He's safe," gesticulates Umpire Fred Marberry as Ed Sullivan, Detroit pitcher, beats out a slow grounder to Buddy Myer with Earl Whitehill taking the throw at first base in the second inning yesterday. Marberry was in no position to play favorites. Detroit and the Nats are only two clubs with which he saw service as a pitcher before he became an umpire a few weeks ago.

Ferrell Hurls Red Sox to 7-0 Win

Pitcher Also Hits Homer; Bill Werber Slams His 10th Circuit Clout.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, July 10.—Wesley Ferrell, ace Red Sox right-hander, turned in his most brilliant pitching performance of the year here today as he shut out the Chicago White Sox with two lone singles and won his thirteenth game, 7 to 0. He also slammed out a home run and a single to drive in two of his mates with a pair of runs.

Bing Miller had a perfect day at bat and pounded out three singles and a double in four times up off three enemy hurlers. Bill Werber drove out his tenth home run of the year in the fourth inning with the bases empty.

Ray Phelps, former Brooklyn moundsman, started for the White Sox and was hit hard from the third to the sixth inning, when he was relieved by Carl Fischer. Whitlow Wyatt pitched the final inning.

Tony Piet, Pittsburgh Pirates castoff, was the only member of the Windy City crew at all able to solve Ferrell's puzzling delivery, making both the hits made off Ferrell. In the fourth inning Tony dropped a short single into center field, and in the seventh inning his roller down the third-base line was scored as a hit.

Dorothy Round to Play On Wightman CupTeam

London, July 10 (AP).—Reconsidering an earlier decision, Dorothy Round, England's top-ranking woman tennis star, announced today she would accept an invitation to play with the British Wightman Cup team against the United States at Forest Hills August 16-17.

Named to the team last Thursday, Miss Round said the following day she would not play because she was suffering from a severe leg strain and was "tired of tennis."

Deans More Effective This Year Than Last

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, July 10.—"Me and Paul" aren't winning ball games for the World Champion Cardinals like they did in 1934, but—believe it or not—they are more efficient.

Last year Jerome Herman and Paul Dean startled the baseball world by chalking up a family record of 49 pitching victories. Thus far in 1935 they have turned in 21 victories and 13 defeats compared to 24 victories and only 8 reverses at the same stage in the pennant race a year ago.

However, if not so effective in the win column, both the cavorting brothers have pitched with more mechanical efficiency. A year ago Dizzy had yielded an average of 4.32 runs a game, while Paul was found for 5.04. This season rival batsmen have chalked up an average of only 3.33 runs off Dizzy and 4.77 off Paul.

Dizzy, who between his widely publicized antics found time to hurl 30 victories during 1934, a feat that won him the "most valuable player" award in the National League, has shown particular improvement.

The vociferous hurler, pitching in 156 innings at this time last year, had allowed 75 runs. This year, working the same number of innings, he has been scored on only 58 times. A year ago he had allowed 160 hits; this year he has cut the number to 149. Last year he had been taken out of the box nine times; this season he has been benched only three times.

"Li'l" Paul's record is more spotty. Although allowing fewer runs per game, he has lost some of the fine control that was his chief stock in trade last year. Pitching in 17 more innings, he has yielded five more runs and one fewer hits than 1934. He is also behind in strikeouts—with 80 in 1934 to 63 this season.

The batting support received by the Deans—a point of contention between Dizzy and his teammates early in the season—has been slightly weaker than last year. The Cardinals scored 130 runs while Dizzy was on the hill last year; this year they have pounded out 122. Behind Paul, the Redbirds of 1934 scored 71 runs; this year they scored 62.

Schumacher's 11th in Row Recorded

Giants' Star Turns Back Pirates, 10-3; Mates Slam 15 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, July 10.—The Giants today got off to a flying start on what they hope will be a pennant-producing tour of the Western cities of the National League when they hammered out a 10-to-3 decision over the Pirates to give Hal Schumacher his eleventh straight mound victory.

The triumph put the league leaders 7½ games ahead of the idle St. Louis Cardinals and allowed them to remain 9½ up on the victorious Chicago Cubs.

Schumacher, who hurled four innings of the All-Star game Monday, showed no ill effects from that workout as he set the Bucs down with five hits to ring up his thirteenth triumph of the season to two defeats and stretch out his brilliant winning record. Of his eleven consecutive victories he has finished every game but the first—a ten-inning affair—and has beaten every team in the league but the Phillies.

Pirates Take Lead.

Today he had only one bad inning, the third, in which the Pirates made four of their five hits and scored all their runs to take a temporary lead. An error by Dick Bartell was an important factor in this uprising. After Tommy Thevenow and Tom Padden started with singles Waite Hoyt bounded to Hughey Critz and Bartell dropped the throw to second. Lloyd Waner's single scored Thevenow and after Woody Jensen hit into a double play Paul Waner smashed a hard base hit that brought in Hoyt and L. Waner. After giving one more hit in the fourth, Schumacher retired the next 16 batsmen in order.

The Giants rapped Hoyt for 4 of their 15 hits in the second frame and drove him out with a four-run assault that put them in front to stay. Guy Bush gave up one more

Nats Release Rookie Burke After Nine-Year Tryout Here

Pitcher, Balking at Shift to Chattanooga, May Quit Baseball.

BOBBY BURKE, perennial rookie of the Nats, parted company with the big leagues yesterday after a nine-year tryout.

The long, lean and lithe left-hander who succeeded in keeping four Washington managers in a perpetual state of expectancy that he would make good, finally exhausted the patience of the Nats' management and was called into the little stucco office of Owner Clark Griffith to receive the information that he had been released outright to Chattanooga.

At that news, Burke balked. Last night he was undecided whether he would join the Chattanooga Club, undergo a tonsil operation, or retire from baseball. He has been offered a position as a commercial artist.

Griffith, however, declared it his belief that Burke would report to Chattanooga within a month.

Scouted for the Washington club by Joe Cantillon in 1927, Burke raised high hopes that he would speedily become a regular member of the Nats' pitching staff. Manager Bucky Harris sent him to Birmingham for a few months' seasoning and recalled him before the end of the campaign after his successful

Barney Welsh Has Little Trouble in Advancing at Spring Lake.

By the Associated Press.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., July 10.—Led by Frankie Parker, of Lawrenceville, N. J., the defending champion, the eight seeded players today filled the quarter-final bracket in the annual invitation tennis tournament on the courts of the Bathing and Tennis Club.

After play had been held up until noon by rain and wet courts, Parker, seeded No. 1, Hal Surface, of Kansas City; Wilbur E. Hess, Fort Worth, Tex.; Bernard T. Welsh, Rockville, Md.; J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J.; William Reeze, Atlanta, Ga.; Charles Harris, West Palm Beach, Fla., and Herbert L. Bowman, New York, swept through the second and third rounds without the loss of a set.

Chief interest centered in Parker and Harris, who conquered the Lawrenceville ace in the Kentucky State championship ten days ago. Harris easily defeated James M. Greer, of Glen Ridge, N. J., 6—3, 6—2, but Parker was forced to apply the pressure to eliminate E. Ramey Donovan, New York, in the third round.

Welsh, National Public Parks champion, eliminated Frank Rericha, New York, 6—4, 6—3. Hess, the new National Intercollegiate titleholder, lost only four games to Maj. R. B. Van Vliet, United States Army champion, while winning 6—2, 6—2.

Cubs Hop Frankhouse To Beat Braves, 6 to 4

Chicago, July 10 (AP).—Teaming a late inning attack on Fred Frankhouse with Charley Root's shut-out relief pitching, the Cubs today wiped out an early Boston lead and defeated the Braves, 6 to 5, in the opening game of the series. It was the Cubs' ninth triumph over the Braves in 11 meetings this season.

After Wally Berger nipped him for his seventeenth homer with none on in the second, Lon Warneke was knocked out of the box in the third when Lee's triple, Moore's single, Whitney's double and two passes were good for three runs. Root hurled four-hit shut-out ball the remaining six innings. Second Baseman Billy Herman led the Cubs' ten-hit attack with two doubles and a single.

Max Baer's Hands Not Broken, Ready For Bout in Fall

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 10. — With a doctor's report that his hands were not broken and would be ready for a fight in September, Max Baer left Baltimore tonight for New York after again asserting that things are all right between him and his recent bride.

The x-ray examination of his left hand by Dr. William F. Rienhoff, jr., at the Johns Hopkins Hospital here showed that no bones were broken but that the tendons are inflamed and that a condition similar to water on the knee or "tennis elbow" exists.

Dr. Reinhoff told the former champion that his hands are in no shape for heavy work just now and added that he never should have fought James J. Braddock, who won the title, with his hands in their present condition.

No operation will be necessary to correct the condition.

U. S. Amateur Golf Field Increased

200 Instead of 188 Get Places; 5 Qualifying Districts Added.

Charlotte, N. C., Among New Points; Interest Has Increased.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Raising the number of districts to 29, five more than last year, the United States Golf Association announced plans today for the 36-hole qualifying tests to be played throughout the country next month for the national amateur championship, scheduled for Cleveland, September 9 to 14.

The qualifying rounds will be played in all sections Tuesday, August 20, except at Denver, Los Angeles and San Francisco, where the date was advanced to August 13 to avoid conflict with State championships.

Growing Interest in Golf.

"Five qualifying points were added and the championship raised from 188 to 200 in recognition of the growing interest in golf generally and in the championship particularly," John G. Jackson, chairman of the United States Golf Association championship committee, said.

Last year the championship operated on an all-match play basis for the first time in 31 years, attracted 758 golfers in the qualifying rounds—an increase of 156 over 1933, the previous high since sectional qualifying trials were instituted in 1931.

This year's tournament also will be man-to-man conflict from the start with William Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, defending the title he won last September at Brookline, Mass.

The field of 200 will include a number of players exempt from qualifying—all former winners of the crown and foreign entrants with the exception of those from Canada, who will be obliged to qualify in the districts most convenient.

35,000 Watch Boxthorn Win at Opening of Suffolk Downs

Bradley Colt Made 4-to-5 Favorite

$429,497 Is Wagered; Simple Exercises Mark Opening.

By the Associated Press.

SUFFOLK DOWNS, Boston, July 10.—A crowd of 35,000, hardly noticeable in this immense and lavish $2,000,000 track, today roared a lusty welcome as thoroughbred running horses returned to Boston after a quarter-century lapse.

Most of this huge throng, which seemed to assure the Eastern Horse Association a highly successful 28-day inaugural meeting, renewed their cheering when Col. E. R. Bradley's 3-year-old Boxthorn, a 1935 Kentucky Derby starter, raced to an easy victory in the $5,000 added Commonwealth feature, a 6-furlong dash.

Boxthorn Away Fast.

Boxthorn, closing as the 4-5 favorite, got away nicely and took command after the first quarter mile, where this son of Blue Larkspur swept past Percy M. Pike's Time Flight, which broke away from the nine-horse field with a mighty spurt from the gate.

After being pulled clear by Don Meade, the Bradley colt was never challenged and he crossed the line with a length to spare on J. B. Partridge's Barcarolle, which closed fast, after passing the quarter-mile pole in eighth position, to beat out the Branncastle Farm's Cloud Sweeper by a head. Young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Good Harvest trailed the show horse by two lengths.

The victor, comfortably burdened with 108 pounds, was clocked in 1:13 2-5 on this new track, which was a bit hard, despite yesterday's heavy rain. Boxthorn added $4,350 to the treasury of the famous Kentucky colonel and his pari-mutuel supporters received $3.80, $3.40 and $3.20 in return for their $2 tickets after he annexed his second win in his five 1935 starts.

Daily Double Pays $22.40.

The mutuel handle for the eight races hit $429,497, a new opening day record for the three New England tracks. Due to the victories of the 3-1 Eddie Wrack, owned by C. W. Phelan, of Boston, and Mrs. Edward Haughton's 6-5 favorite Black Highbrow in the first and third races, daily-double players received only $22.40 for their $2 investments.

The opening of this track was observed with simple exercises. Gov. James M. Curley and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield made brief addresses as the horses were going to the post for the first race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EDDIE WRACK, $8.60, $3.40, $2.40; GALA DAME, $3.00, $2.20; PEEPER, $3.00.

EDDIE WRACK followed in closest pursuit of the pace established by GALA DAME until swinging from the back stretch, went to the front when called upon, drew clear before reaching the stretch and, roused repeatedly through the last furlong, was never threatened. GALA DAME had speed from the start, was steadied along in front, but was unable to keep pace when challenged. PEEPER raced well placed from the outset though unable to reach the leading pair. RUTLAND was never a serious threat after a brief display of early speed. BEFITTING was never prominent.

SECOND RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:46. Off at 2:47. Winner, H. Neusteter's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MASKED GAL, $39.80, $16.60, $7.00; CASH BOOK, $7.00, $4.40; SANDY MACK, $3.60.

MASKED GAL was not called upon until swinging from the back stretch, moved up steadily thereafter and, closing stoutly through the stretch, wore down SANDY MACK to draw out steadily at the close. CASH BOOK worked her way up gradually and closed with good energy in the stretch run. SANDY MACK displayed good speed to take the command, was much used in disposing of SKOTCHY and had nothing left when challenged by the first two. EDRI was a prominent factor the entire journey. SKOTCHY hard ridden while forcing the pace, faltered in the last quarter-mile. SAMBO JONES was going stoutly at the finish. RICH STRIKE was unable to reach the leaders.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 3:28. Off at 3:30. Winner, Mrs. E. Haughton's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK HIGHBROW, $4.20, $3.00, $2.20; LITTLE NYMPH, $3.60, $2.40; TRANSIT LADY, $2.40.

BLACK HIGHBROW was sent up on the outside approaching the far turn, wore down the leaders midway of the turn, drew clear when reaching the stretch and drew out as if much the best. LITTLE NYMPH, hard ridden early to show the way to TRANSIT LADY, continued determinedly to the close though unable to cope with the bid of the winner. TRANSIT LADY, saving ground all the way, faltered in the closing three-sixteenths. SEA TED went evenly. The others were trailers throughout.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:05. Off at 4:05½. Winner, Mrs. Thomas E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHATMOSS, $27.80, $13.20, $6.00; BOLD LOVER, $3.80, $3.00; GUSTO, $4.60.

CHATMOSS, in close pursuit of the early pace, wore down BOLD LOVER midway of the far turn, came wide into the stretch and, under intermittent punishment, held sway to the end. BOLD LOVER was prominently placed all the way, was carried wide to the stretch turn and, although holding on determinedly, was unable to keep pace with the winner in the drive. GUSTO, outrun for the first half-mile, moved up gradually thereafter and finished with good energy. GOV. SHOLTZ trailed for the first three-quarters of a mile and closed some ground. ROUGH PLAYER showed good speed racing well up for the first six furlongs. PROUD GIRL, hard ridden while chasing the early pacemaker closely, faltered badly in the last quarter-mile.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $5,000 added. The Commonwealth. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won cleverly and handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:49. Winner, E. R. Bradley's br. c. (3), by Blue Larkspur—Doreid. Trained by H. Thompson. Value to winner, $4,350; second, $1,000; third, $500; fourth, $250. Time, 0:23 2-5. 0:47. 1:13 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOXTHORN, $3.80, $3.40, $3.20; BARCAROLLE, $14.40, $8.00; CLOUD SWEEPER, $6.80.

BOXTHORN, away fast, was roused several times through the first quarter-mile when outrun by TIME FLIGHT, moved up stoutly when rounding the far turn, took command when called upon and, drawing clear, was never seriously threatened. BARCAROLLE, outrun early, began improving his position gradually in the last three furlongs, and closed with a rush in the last three-sixteenths. CLOUD SWEEPER moved up threateningly midway of the turn, but despite hard riding, was unable to keep pace in the drive. GOOD HARVEST saved a world of ground on the inside at the stretch turn and, after looming up threateningly nearing the furlong pole, was unable to make up any ground thereafter. SPIXI was never a factor. TIME FLIGHT displayed good speed for the opening three furlongs. KING'S PLEASURE tired. VICARESS was never prominent.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:24. Off at 5:25. RETRIBUTION was not hurried during the early stages, worked her way up gradually on the outside, moved up stoutly in the stretch and, fighting it out courageously, outlasted CATINO at the end. The latter moved up steadily after going a half-mile to take command from MATHIAS and, hard ridden at the end, just failed to last. GOLDFIN, a trailer during the early stages, threaded her way through her field and held on gamely in the drive. MATHIAS had good speed in pacemaking, but was unable to keep pace when challenged.

FANCY FLIGHT, showing speed from the start, withstood determined opposition from GUARDIAN, disposing of him and racing clear held SUN TEATIME safe at the end. The latter moved up steadily on the outside and closed with good energy through the stretch. GAY CREST, well placed all the way, continued determinedly to the end. GUARDIAN, hard ridden early, weakened in the last three-sixteenths. CYNWYD made up some ground. PRINCE POMPEY made up some ground. LEE GOLD was prominent. QUEEN HELEN tired. AIR LINE never could reach the leaders. PLUMAGE was far back throughout.

CRYSTAL PRINCE, in hand for the first half-mile, moved up stoutly when called upon, wore down the leaders when reaching the stretch and held MIDSHIPMAN safe at the end. MIDSHIPMAN, restrained early, held on stubbornly under spressure and closed with good energy. JOHNS BIRTHDAY, well placed all the way, assumed the lead before reaching the stretch, but was unable to maintain his advantage through the stretch. Rivers and Belloise on Edge For Battle at Legion Arena

Featherweights to Feature First Show; Kelley in Preliminary.

George Hughes, his rotund manager, has piloted the 24-year-old fighter through more than 200 fights, and to hear him talk you'd think that Belloise boy was peer of any scrapper in any weight. Mike took a last workout yesterday and afterward admitted he could lick California Joe.

"No, I've never seen him fight," he said, "but I don't need to."

In the course of the afternoon he fanned the big gymnasium bag with his whizzing southpaw punch until the ceiling creaked. Belloise, who holds a record of more than 30 wins to two losses in the last three years, will be the distinct favorite in the Fifth and Florida avenue arena tonight. He has proven his class and Rivers will be fighting to vindicate himself and start again on the upward road. Ravored or no, however, Rivers will be fighting.

Cicero Favorite.

A semi-final of eight rounds sees Andy Kelley, of Richmond, pitted against Frankie Cicero, Baltimore youth, who has fought some 40 bouts in the Monumental City. Cicero will be favored.

Two tough colored boys named Meyer Rowen and Frankie Dillon will have it out in a six-rounder. Rowen, who has achieved some reputation as a flashy lightweight in the black belt, is considered better than the other, a Maryland farm boy, although the latter has a powerful left fist.

The prelims are given over to the suburbs. Kid Huey, dark scrapper from Alexandria, faces Bobby Hayes, of the U street sector, and Buster Buckley, also of Alexandria, mixes with Kirkwood Burke, of Clarendon.

Dettweilers Score 76 to Win Two-Ball Tourney at Columbia

Billy, Helen Victors By 3 Strokes

D. C. Golfers Dominate Play; Mrs. Knox and Billy Shea Second.

THE golfing Dettweilers, Billy and Helen, of Congressional Country Club, showed plenty of teamwork yesterday at Columbia Country Club, posting an 18-hole score of 76, 6 over par, to win low gross honors in the two-ball tournament sponsored by the Maryland State Golf Association.

Despite 3-putt greens on the sixth, eighth and sixteenth, where they went over par on each hole, the Dettweilers, fired a brace of 38's to top their nearest pursuers, Mrs. Harry A. Knox and 18-year-old Billy Shea, both of Congressional, by three strokes. Shea, who defeated Dettweiler in the finals of the Metropolitan Schoolboy and the District junior championships, and Mrs. Knox, were even with the Dettweilers at the seventeenth, but finished 5-6, 3 over par, after 3-putting both greens.

Washington golfers outclassed their Baltimore twosomes in the matter of prizes, atoning for previous routs in Monumental City courses in State association tournaments.

Some 120 golfers competed.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence D. Bills, of Columbia, came in a few minutes before 8 o'clock with a winning net score of 90-23—67 just when the good folk were preparing to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Mihills, of Manor, whose 88-20—68 looked liked a sure first-prize winner until the Bills reported their fine round. Mr. and Mrs. Bills had 47-43 for the two nines and Mr. and Mrs. Mihills, 45-43.

Mrs. Norman B. Frost, of Columbia, and F. G. Awalt, of Congressional, captured third low net by virtue of their 91-20—71.

Tied for fourth were the following teams: Mrs. W. F. Peterson, of Elkridge and John DeFord, Baltimore Country Club, with 87-15—72; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Totman, of Maryland Country Club, 93-21-72; Mrs. C. C. Barr, of Maryland and R. T. Walsh, of Columbia, with 83-11—72; Mrs. Ora Emge and D. G. Morris, of Beaver Dam, with 81-9—72, and Mrs. L. O. Eagles Get One Hit; Chesapeake Wins

Alexandrians Score Once on Fluke and Error.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point, Va., July 10.—A scratch hit that struck the first base bag in the seventh inning here today robbed Paul Folliard of a no-hit, no-run game against the Alexandria Eagles. Chesapeake won, 5 to 1.

Behind the hitting of Jim Trexler, Tom Wolfe and John Coffee, the first two getting tripples, Folliard was invincible and struck out 17 men—four in the eighth, when Phenix let a third strike get by him.

Bob Goldstein Will Try Pro Fighting

Collegiate Champion Will Box in Four-Rounder Here Monday.

BOBBY GOLDSTEIN, local boy who captained the championship ring team at the University of Virginia three years ago and was generally acknowledged as one the greatest college boxers in the country, announced yesterday that he would turn professional and meet an opponent yet to be selected on the Dublinsky-Wilson card here next Monday night. He will fight four rounds in a special preliminary.

Goldstein has previously refused repeated overtures to battle commercially and has dropped from the ring picture in pursuit of a law education. He had some success coaching an amatuer squad at a local school last winter.

"I've every confidence I can scale the heights and start going places within a year," Goldstein declared yesterday," otherwise I'd stick to medicine.

"With no intention of being egotistical I can truthfully say that I have learned enough in the amateurs to get me away to a flying start. I've talked it over with my brother, Goldie Ahearn, and I can't think of a better time to get started than right now."

Training in Secret.

At Virginia, Goldstein gained immortality when he was selected on the all-time, All-American collegiate ring team of "Spike" Webb, colorful Navy Academy coach. He was twice Southern Intercollegiate featherweight boxing champion and later Southern Intercollegiate lightweight champion with the Cavaliers and captained the team in his last year of competition. He also was twice runner-up in the national intercollegiates and national intercollegiate lightweight champion in 1932.

In four years of collegiate competition against the country's best boxers, Bobby was defeated but once, by Norment Quarles, his arch rival from the University of North Carolina. Two winters ago he met Quarles again on an amateur card in Richmond and lost a close decision. He has not fought since.

Owens Is Believed Peer of Dark Rival

Trials of Starters.

They are quick, efficient, prompt and know what it is all about. If any one thinks it is a cinch to get a bunch of nervous athletes to line up and start a race, he ought to try it. All the boys want to do is practice. No sooner is one recalled than the next one breaks loose and goes skittering down the track.

Of course, the place from which to see a track meet is wearing a badge, down among the AAU'ers. You can stand right on the finish line and see the agony that is caused by that final desperate striving for victory and the finish of a race.

3 Pitchers Win Flag For Cumberland Club

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., July 10.—Pitching records for the first-half schedule of the Interstate League reveal the fact that the American Legion team used only three hurlers in the 13 complete games played by the team and not once was a relief pitcher called upon, as Manager Hubert Radcliffe's outfit won the race by the margin of 1½ games.

The league's leading pitcher for the first half was Roy (Gabby) Scott, of the Celanese A. A., who scored four victories against a single setback. Phil Fleming and Milt Rose, the Centerville southpaw, are tied for runner-up honors.

Culpeper Holds Its Advantage In Valley

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WAYNESBORO, Va., July 10.—Culpeper tightened it's grip on the Valley League lead here today by trouncing Waynesboro, 5 to 2. Two errors and three hits, one a triple by Douglass, brought the champions four runs in the third inning.

Waynesboro scored twice in same inning when Crawford doubled and Will, Hulvey and Connell singled. Lefty McIntire allowed the locals only one hit after this frame. Kit May, Waynesboro manager, retired from the mound after Hash's triple in the fifth. Hash, ace Culpeper pitcher, who went into right field when Umpire Talley banished Douglass for disputing a decision, suffered an injury to his hurling arm when hit by pitched ball in the ninth.

Harrisonburg, Va., July 10.—Bob Long, starting his first game of the year, held Orange to four hits and fanned ten last night as Harrisonburg triumphed, 8 to 1. This was the first appearance of the Orange Club here and the home club obtained revenge for the defeat suffered at Orange Sunday.

Bud Kibler, Harrisonburg's veteran outfielder, went on a hitting rampage with a home run, two doubles and a single. He was robbed of another double by marvelous catch by Kline, Orange centerfielder.

Tisdale who started for Orange, was knocked out in the sixth when Harrisonburg scored four runs. J. Mustard who succeeded him allowed only two hits.

Charlottesville, Va., July 10.—Defeating Front Royal here this afternoon, 8 to 7, the Charlottesville team advanced to second place in the Valley League. Having won eight out of their last nine games, the locals are hopeful of landing the flag for the first half of the season, which ends July 21.

Front Royal enjoyed a three-run lead up to the ninth inning, when Charlottesville pushed over four runs. In this frame Stankins was forced to give way to Cassell, ace of the visiting team. With the bases full, Cassell issued a pass, forcing in the run that knotted the count, and an error by Lyle McFall on Haslup's grounder allowed the winning run to cross the plate, with only one out.

Moore and Fary were the batting stars for the locals, collecting seven hits between them and each securing a double. Reitz also contributed a two-base blow.

Front Royal had to be content with five hits, two of which were made by Goodwin.

Runabouts Are Out In Tri-City Regatta

Committee Rules Boats Are "Too Slow."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Herald Harbor, Md., July 10.—Because they make the "poorest showings," officials said, racing runabouts were voted out of this month's Tri-City Regatta at a meeting of the regatta race committee here today. The ruling affects classes A, B, C, D and E for the annual races on the Severn, July 27 and 28.

Commodore Albert L. Waters, who presided over the meeting, cited a similar elimination in the race program of this year's President's Cup Regatta. The unanimous vote of the committe was communicated to the American Powerboat Association of New York, whose chairman approved the step.

An issue was raised upon complaint of Len S. Bailey, Philadelphia, owner and pilot of Bo-Peep, holder of the world's record of 34.584.

Umpire Forgets Fine, So Is Fined Himself

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., July 10.—J. E. Taylor, president of the Bi-State Baseball League, imposed a fine on Umpire Charles Barbour because of his failure to report the benching and fining of Second Baseman Leonard of the Danville team at a game played in Fieldale on July 1. Leonard disputed a decision and was ordered from the game and was told he would be fined, but Barbour forgot to turn in a report and was called to make an accounting.

Due to the fact that Blairton does not play Sunday ball, it was necessary to continue the Wednesday playing dates.

Philosopher-Humorist of Pro Ranks Greeted by Club Officials.

By Dave Herman.

Wiffy Cox, golfdom's philosopher-humorist, who has spent the last 29 years swinging golf clubs, arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon and formally took over his duties as professional at Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

Along with the nationally famous Brooklyn seige gun came a carload of golf equipment with which he immediately decorated the Kenwood golf shop. This included his high-powered sticks which almost won him the National Open championship last year at Merion.

Russ Hollebaugh, well known local sporting goods salesman, who was instrumental in bringing Cox to Kenwood as successor to Al Houghton, headed the reception committee. Others who greeted Cox were Don Chamberlin, club vice president; Ed Olsen, golf chairman, and Fred Fuller, manager.

Poses for Cameramen.

The copper-skinned Cox, who is full of wise cracks, whether the subject is golf or Mussolini's plans to expand Italy at the expense of Haile Selassie, spent a good bit of the afternoon posing for photographers and inspecting the course.

The transplanted Brooklyn professional, motored around the course with Hollebaugh. He said he was extremely pleased with the layout, and believed it could be made somewhat tougher. Cox plans to suggest a few changes in the layout to the golf committee.

"Why in the heck do you want to make the course harder when you had quite a battle with par in the National Capital open?" Cox was asked.

"Huh, my man, don't you know that the harder they come the easier they fall."

Fresh From Record Round.

Cox explained that he had been associated with one course—Dyker Beach—formerly the Marine and Field Club, Brooklyn, since 1916, where he was a caddy at 9, became caddy master at 15, assistant pro at 18 and pro at 20.

His feats as a course record smasher known the world over, Cox brought the news that he left something for his friends at Dyker Beach to remember him by when he shot a 64 over the the new 18-hole course there the same day it was opened. That was just three weeks ago. The course measures 65,850 yards.

Cox has not made any decision as to his assistant. Al Jamison, assistant to Al Houghton, has acted as pro for the past few weeks.

Next Monday afternoon Cox will be presented to the local professional fraternity and golf writers at a tournament banquet at Kenwood.

Ballston Replaces Herndon in League

A midseason meeting of the Northern Virginia Baseball League of The Post Sandlot Association has resulted in the substitution of the White Star Athletic Club, of Ballston, in the league in place of the Herndon club. The latter team notified President James C. Buchanan that it would be unable to continue in the circuit, due to financial difficulties.

It also was decided by teams in the Red Section to play the remainder of the campaign on a split-season basis. The White Section decided to play without a split season.

White Star will open its league drive Sunday with a game on its own diamond in Ballston against the Arlington club. Millwood will meet Purcellville in a double header, the first game to start at 1:30 p. m.

The roster of the Arlington team has been changed by the addition of Gordon Pine, William Turner, Henry Jarboe, Warren Ferguson and Louis Cook to the squad in place of Rodney Harrison and Edward Goldblatt.

Savoldi Aims Tootsies at Donovan

Feet to Fly Tonight as Joe and Jack Meet in Return Match.

By George Considine.

A SUMMER night, a beautiful moon and a romantic setting notwithstanding, the rassle boys tonight will muscle out the much molested Washington Senators and make merry at Griffith Stadium. It's a long, uninteresting story, folks. So just turn over to Mr. Povich's column and forget all about it.

It all started two weeks ago when Li'l Jackie Donovan, aged 26, thinking that he was about to be declared the winnah of a struggle-tussle and smiling broadly at his deah public, was laid among the sweetpeas by a well-placed foot belonging to one Giuseppe Mussolini Savoldi, the foot well-placer.

This so hurt the customers in the twenty-seventh row of the balcony that they upped, in a body, to Promoter Joe Turner and demanded a return match. So, what did Turner do? He took the sentiments of the delegation seriously and booked the principals to commit it again.

One of the most alert and quick-witted heavyweights in the rassle racket, Donovan claims to have mastered all the fundamentals of Savoldi's highly touted "drop kick." We're not surprised either, because the Irish flipster pulled a similar stunt this spring at the Auditorium when he entangled Chief Little Wolf in his own "death-lock." The Injun would have been licked, too, if he hadn't grabbed the ropes and pulled himself to safety.

The boys will have a real incentive to produce the best that is in them tonight. Maestro Turner has promised the winner, on condition the battle is worth while, a shot at Danno O'Mahoney's world championship. Who knows? Perhaps we shall see a respectable imbro

Grains Nervous Awaiting Report

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 10.—Uncertainty over changes of a surprise in the United States Government crop report did much to restrain an upward trend of grain values today. The report, when issued after the close of trading, proved to be unexpectedly bearish.

In contrast with the Government report, unfavorable threshing returns from the domestic winter wheat harvest region Southwest, and from other sections as well, got much attention during the day as a bullish factor, and so, too, did reports of more and more threatening danger of severe black rust injury to the spring crop.

After averaging higher most of the day, wheat closed nervous, ⅜ off to ½ up, compared with yesterday's finish, September, 85¼@85⅝; corn unchanged to ⅜ down, September, 75⅜@75½; oats at ¼ to ⅝ decline, and provisions varying from 5 cents setback to 25 cents gain.

Sugar Melt Increases.

New York, July 10 (AP).—Sugar melt of 13 United States refineries from January 1 to June 29 totaled 2,105,000 long tons compared with 1,740,000 in the same period a year ago, according to the Sugar Institute.

Norfolk Banks Gain 10 Per Cent Deposits

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., July 10.—Norfolk banks had $48,575,207 on deposit at the close of business June 29, according to a composite statement compiled today. This was an increase of $4,427,614 over the deposits on hand at the close of business June 30, 1934. All six of the commercial banks showed substantial gains.

Steel Capacity Up to 36½ %

Present Rate Compares With 27 Per Cent a Year Ago.

New York, July 10.—Steel ingot output has rebounded to 36½ per cent of capacity, or only 1½ points short of the rate that prevailed in the last two weeks of June. The current operation compares with 27 per cent in the corresponding week of 1934, says Iron Age. But the difference in the production pace does not fully measure the improvement in the industry's position over what it was a year ago. At that time producers' customers were loaded up with swollen inventories which had been accumulated in anticipation of price advances. Today buyers' stocks are relatively light and, in some instances, actually subnormal because of postponement of purchases for possible price advantage.

Other favorable factors are the sustained demand for automobiles, with July assemblies estimated at 275,000 units, and marked betterment in the condition of the farmer, who a year ago was faced by one of the worst droughts in history. Agricultural buying is not only sustaining farm equipment and tractor manufacture but is accounting for out-of-season activity in roofing sheets, barbed wire and fencing.

Leading automobile makers will be down for a time in August for retooling, but volume purchases of steel for new models, which will get into production in September, will be made late this month or in the first half of next month. Current steel business from the motor car industry consists both of fill-in lots for final runs on 1935 models and initial small orders for 1936 cars.

Market Moves Of the Day Seen In Brief Review

What the Stock Market Did.

Advances	380	305
Declines	203	291
Unchanged	206	186
Total issues	771	782

Stocks—A steady orderly advance carried many issues to year's highs. Realizing near the close failed to seriously disturb the even tenor shown through most of the session. Sales were 1,150,160 shares.

Bonds—Conflicting trends predominated with a large number of loans definitely soft. Utilities marked time and rails lacked initiative. Industrials showed the greatest interest. Transfers aggregated $10,720,000.

Curb—With the exception of utilities, which tended to droop, prices moved generally upward in active trading. Sales, approximately 223,000 shares.

Grains—Uncertainty over the crop report restrained the upward trend of grain prices. The report, issued after the close, was unexpectedly bearish. July wheat last at 84⅝ and July corn final at 81⅞.

Cotton—Prices fluctuated within a narrow range and closings were 2 to 4 points higher. July last at 12.12.

Sugar—Raw sugar steadied and closed at 3.30. Refined unchanged at 5.25 for the fine granulated.

Coffee—Spot coffee quiet and unchanged. Rio No. 7 at 6⅞ and Santos No. 4 at 8.

Bar silver—Up ⅝ of a cent in New York to close at 68¾ cents per ounce. London silver was up ⅞d to 31⅛d (69.59 cents).

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Continue Advance in Million Share Trading —Wheat Rises—Silver Crisis Ends With Dollars Hardening.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, July 10.—Financial markets lacked excitement, but they encouraged the speculative element either to increase buying or hold to positions. Stocks began with moderately higher prices and then proceeded along a plane during the greater part of the day, finding incentive somewhere to rally briskly for a while in the last hour. Prices in nearly all directions were moderately higher at the close, with a turnover of more than a million shares. Bonds were irregular. Cotton was barely steady. September wheat closed ⅜ of a cent higher at 85⅝ cents a bushel.

Passing of the crisis in silver abroad left the market with less to talk about and also lifted somewhat the apprehension over the future for stocks. A bad break in silver might well have precipitated closing out of speculative positions in other commodities and in shares. On this side some of the silver interests say they are confident as ever that the price for the metal will go higher—partly because a higher price is on the cards for the commodity, and partly because they think the Government will be forced to buy more and more.

What apparently has happened recently is that speculators who took up options on silver some time ago, when the price was booming, had to face settlement day. They never had fears about finding a buyer, but this time the Treasury seems to have outsmarted them a little. It took the metal from the expiring options, but was able to buy several million ounces at much below the price of a few weeks ago.

Good Faith.

Just the same, the American taxpayer will have to find the money that has gone to take silver from the hands of Eastern holders who must feel highly pleased at obtaining a much higher price than would have been possible without our silver purchase act. Soon a fleet of trucks will be rolling into the old assay office building and unloading silver into the caves, where it will do as much good as the air now filling them is doing. Then a fresh bull position will be built up, and the old round continued.

American purchases in London today were said to have been small. President Roosevelt told the press that no change had been made in policy; that the Administration would continue to carry out in good faith the terms of the act, i. e., boost the price to $1.29 an ounce, and hold it there until the taxpayers' cries became too audible to be ignored, or until conditions in China became intolerable.

Stabilization of the silver market, for the moment, turned the tide of the exchanges. Dollars rose against sterling and climbed higher on francs, the latter having the additional handicap of an uncertain position in French finance and politics. The action of the market confirmed the view that sterling recently has risen merely because of the sale of dollars in London for the purchase of silver thrown on the market by speculators unwilling to take up their expiring options.

New Tests.

Before long the season will begin to work against sterling. Late summer and early autumn is the time of year when payments are made in sterling for raw materials bought in this and other countries. The quotation shortly should begin to fall from natural causes, with the usual recovery in the winter. Dollars, on the other hand, for trade reasons also, are running into a season of strength, and that seasonal tendency, in the view of some observers, will be accentuated by new crises in the gold standard countries before the year is out.

Midweek trade news was mixed. The output of electricity last week fell sharply from the preceding week, owing to the holiday, but it was 6.4 per cent above a year ago. Railroad traffic was less fortunate. Not only was the drop because of the holiday considerable, but the actual total was the lowest since the dark days of the spring of 1933, Christmas weeks excepted.

The United States Steel Corporation reported a shrinkage in shipments for June, but the steel trade journals found the outlook brighter. The Iron Age was especially pleased with the situation, as compared with a year ago, because of light inventories among consumers and good orders in prospect from the motor, farm equipment and construction industries.

Rail Credit Board To Distribute 1%

E. G. Buckland, president of the Railroad Credit Corporation, said yesterday that the Railroad Credit Corportaion would make its nineteenth liquidating distribution, equivalent to 1 per cent of the contributed fund, on July 31.

This distribution will repay $735,885, of which $379,858 will be in cash and $356,027 in credits on obligations due the corporation. The total returned by the corporation to participating carriers will then amount to $25,020,094, or 34 per cent, of which $11,285,395 will have been paid in cash and $13,734,699 in credits.

Closed Banks Report Advance In Collections

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Norman R. Hamilton, receiver for 5 local insolvent banks with total deposits at time of failure in excess of $16,000,000, last night reported that more than $300,000 in additional assets had been collected during the past three months and would eventually be disbursed in deposit dividends.

Half yearly reports for the 5 banks which include the District National, the Northeast Savings, the Seventh Street Savings, the Washington Savings and the Potomac Savings Banks were submitted to the Comptroller of the Currency yesterday.

No recommendation for any payment to depositors was included in the report, although the recently authorized dividend of the Potomac Savings Bank will be distributed shortly.

The largest collection was reported by the District National, which added $155,748 to its cash balance. Total collections of this bank now stand at $4,344,476. Deposits when the bank was suspended on March 5, 1933, were $6,077,504.

Remaining assets deemed collectible by the receiver were set at $2,153,944 with a total book value of $4,655,178. Improved local business conditions were reflected by the fact that the estimated value of assets increased $360,000 over the figure reported three months ago.

The Potomac Savings Bank, second largest of the banks administered by Hamilton, reported that $50,000 had been taken in during the last three months. The aggregate paid in to date it $1,524,000. Total deposits at the time of failure were $2,069,000.

Book value of assets still uncollected was set at $1,581,142, with an estimated value of $871,595. Since the date of last report, the estimated value of listed assets increased $14,830.

The Seventh Street Savings Bank drew in $36,415 during the last quarter for a grand total of $926,362. Deposit liabilities when the bank failed to reopen after the bank holiday in 1933 were $1,724,404.

The estimated value of assets still contained in the bank were set by Receiver Hamilton at $473,140, while the book value of remaining assets is $791,293. Improved condition of the estimated value of the remaining assets was shown by the fact that they had increased $25,919 in the past three months.

The Northeast Savings Bank report for the period showed that $16,756 had been collected since the date of last report for a present total of $1,172,224. The bank contained $1,738,219 in deposits when it was closed.

Estimated assets still receivable were set at $393,217, while the book value is $555,162. Improved conditions were shown here also by the fact that estimated assets increased $14,082 in the three months.

Collections for the Washington Savings Bank in the period amounted to $41,059 for a total of $383,209 since the bank was placed in receivership. Total deposits at the time of failure were $711,900.

Estimated good assets were set at $171,679, while book assets remaining uncollected are listed at $261,111. Here also estimated assets increased during the past three months with a gain of $26,965 over the last report.

Business Loans By Banks Near Lowest Record

Richmond One of Three Reserve Districts at Bottom Level.

New York, July 10.—A lack of borrowings and repayment of existing indebtedness have resulted in a reduction in the latest figures on "commercial" loans of reporting member banks in the Federal Reserve system to within $10,000,000 of the lowest recorded level, according to a compilation by the Wall Street Journal. Steady decreases have occurred over the last several months in business advances, such as acceptances and commercial paper and strictly commercial financing.

For all reporting member banks in the Reserve system, the three classes of commercial advances (acceptances and commercial paper, loans on real estate and strictly commercial loans), aggregated $4,449,000,000 on July 3, last, compared with the record low of $4,439,000,000 on July 18, 1934. The recent total represented a drop of $34,000,000 compared with the previous week, and $104,000,000 compared with the beginning of the year. The 1934-1935 peak was $4,764,000,000, on October 17, last, and the current total discloses a curtailment of $315,000,000 since that date. For reporting banks, these loans were at their record peak in November, 1929, when they averaged $9,792,000,000.

New low levels were struck by banks in three reserve districts last week; namely, New York, Richmond and Minneapolis. Sharp declines were shown in the Atlanta, St. Louis and Dallas districts; although their aggregates were still above the 1934-1935 low points.

Loans by banks in the New York district totaled $1,730,000,000, a reduction of $9,000,000 in the week and compared with $1,820,000,000 at the beginning of the year. Against a year ago these institutions show a diminution of $81,000,000, while the peak in 1934-1935 was $2,032,000,000, or $302,000,000 greater than the latest figure.

In the Atlanta district banks disclosed a shrinkage of $10,000,000, while in the St. Louis district the reduction amounted to $9,000,000 in the July 3 week. In only two districts was any expansion shown—in Philadelphia and in Boston—$1,000,000 each.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

Dollars strengthened in world foreign exchange markets yesterday. In the meantime, bar silver rallied in London and Far Eastern currencies advanced.

Wall street exchange experts thought this indicated that U. S. Treasury buying of silver had stemmed the recent tide of selling in London. They attributed the rise in the dollar to cessation of transfer of funds to London to purchase the white metal.

The dollar rose in London to 4.95⅛ to the pound. The trend was partially reversed in later sessions in New York, with sterling at midday at $4.96⅛, off only ⅜ of a cent from yesterday's close.

After the dollar rose to the equivalent of 6.628 cents to the franc in Paris, the franc was quoted in New York at 6.63 cents, off .01 of a cent. Other gold bloc currencies registered similar declines.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Renewed support on the stock exchange today lifted gilt-edged securities and some industrials and transatlantic shares. Other groups eased due to lack of support and uncertainty over the foreign political outlook. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Rentes weakened on the bourse after a strong opening. The market is still reflecting anxiety over the political situation. International shares moved irregularly although Suez issues improved. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Prices promptly weakened when the bourse management invoked a measure against continuously rising prices. Brokers interpret this as a warning to buyers against speculation.

N. Y. Curb Prices Register Advance

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—With the exception of drooping tendencies among utilities, curb market stocks moved upward in most divisions of the list today. Alcohol stocks were especially attractive to traders and advances in this group were larger than the average. Elsewhere trading was moderately active.

While utility stocks were under no severe pressure, buying orders were scarce and such leaders as American Gas and Electric Bond & Share yielded under small offerings. Niagara Hudson Power, however, was able to buck the tide and ended one-eighth higher at 7⅛. Commonwealth Edison also sold higher.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

GRADATIONS are few in British civil service classification. The description further, of each class is broad and rests less upon specific description than upon degree of responsibility. The four basic classes, outlined here yesterday, are described in the following manner by the British joint committee on reorganization:

BAKER.

Writing assistant class—This class is employed on work preliminary to machine operations (punching, tabulating, etc.); on hand-copying and transcribing work (writing out acknowledgments, filling forms, warrants and bills); on the addressing of letters; on the counting and routine examination of postal orders, insurance cards, etc.; on the casting and preparation of schedules and lists, and the writing-up of simple cards; and in custody of card indexes * * * simple routine work of a similar character.

Clerical class—To this class we would entrust all the simpler clerical duties in public departments, insofar as these are not assigned to writing assistants in accordance with the principles already stated, and in addition the following duties:

Dealing with particular cases in accordance with well-defined regulations of instructions or general practice; scrutinizing, checking and cross-checking straightforward accounts, claims, returns, etc., under well-defined instructions.

Preparation of material for returns, accounts and statistics in prescribed forms.

Supervision of the work of writing assistants.

Executive class—To this class we would assign the higher work of the supply and accounting departments, and of other executive or specialized branches of the Civil Service. This work covers a wide field, and requires in different degrees qualities of judgment, initiative and resource. In the junior ranks it comprises the critical examination of particular cases of lesser importance not clearly within the scope of approved regulations or general decisions, initial investigations into matters of higher importance, and the immediate direction of small blocks of business. In its upper ranges it is concerned with matters of internal organization and control, with the settlement of broad questions arising out of business in hand or in contemplation, and with the responsible conduct of important operations.

Administrative class—The duties appropriate to this class are those concerned with the formation of policy, with the coordination and improvement of government machinery, and with the general administration and control of the Department of the Public Service.

These clerical classes are known collectively as the treasury classes, and are common to many or all of the ministries.

The apparent simplicity of the clerical classification is complicated by the fact that each department is recognized as possessing the right to insist upon a special departmental classification for special types of clerical work.

Therefore, we find in addition to the treasury classes large numbers of departmental clerical and executive class offices, especially such as the ministry of labor clerical class, the tax clerk, and others. The actual number of departmental executive class officers exceeds the number of treasury class officers. An attempt was made in 1920 to merge departmental clerical classes with the treasury classes, but with negligible success.

Going from the clerical classes, which are broadly conceived, we find much the same variety of specialized classes in the departments as would be found in the corresponding American services. The postoffice has a large number of specialist classes peculiarly required for the handling of mails; the revenue services have specialist officers acquainted with the intricacies of income tax and customs legislation and regulations; the comptroller general has a variety of accounting and finance officers, and so on.

Here the main point to note is the sweeping autonomy of the department in the classification of its own personnel, subject to review by the establishment division of the treasury—a review which has not been effectively used in the interest of consolidation of classes. The prevalent attitude is that apart from the treasury classes the departments should be left to handle their own classification problems.

This view is especially emphasized with respect to the professional, technical and scientific officers. Here a multiplicity of titles exists, with varying rates of pay, peculiar to each department or scientific institution. Continuous efforts on the part of the professional officers to secure simplification of classes and pay structures have failed to convince the responsible departmental authorities that simplification is desirable.

Classification in the British service will be discussed further tomorrow.

BY an overwhelming majority, the nearly 10,000 employes of Interior Department, Public Works Administration and the Oil Administration have voted to continue the 8 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. work until autumn or "further notice" from Secretary Ickes. Last summer daylight-saving time was introduced after a poll indicated 66 per cent of the employes desired it. The system has grown more popular as shown by the poll just tabulated, revealing 77 per cent of the employes favoring going to work at 8 a. m.

Federal Bridge League.

North and South, first, Dr. S. C. Blanck, Agriculture, and Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Corley, U. S. N., retired; second, Frank Scofield (P), Bureau of Standards, and J. W. Gardiner, D. C. Supreme Court.

East and West, first, W. C. Stark and C. W. Stark; second, J. R. Moore (C), and R. Higgen (C).

The next session will be held on the night of July 23.

Employes in the office of the chief of engineers, War, are a thoughtful group, Mrs. Norman Hathaway, formerly Miss Marjorie Biggs, will testify. Miss Biggs became the bride of the promient automobile man at Frederick, Md., last Saturday. On returning to her desk at War Department, Mrs. Hathaway found it decorated and laden with numerous gifts, including a handsome flat silverware set.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor between 3:30 and 5 p. m. today. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's Theaters: (F), Loew's Fox (stage, Billy Rose's Cavalcade and other acts; screen, "Murder in the Fleet," with Robert Taylor and Jean Parker); (P), Loew's Palace (William Powell and Luise Rainer in "Escapade"); (C) Loew's Columbia (Marlene Dietrich in "The Devil Is a Woman").

Mrs. Florence Jones Vining, special assistant to the director of the field division, in charge of women's activities, left this week for Rock Hill and Charleston, S. C., to consult with officials regarding the better housing program of FHA.

Marriage Bill Reported.

The House Civil Service Committee yesterday ordered that H. R. 5051, concerning married people in Government service, be reported with three limitations, summarized as follows:

1. That a second member of the family may not be employed in the future in the Government service if the joint salaries will be more than $4,000.

2. That marriage of persons already in the service will not affect their status.

3. That reinstatement of those removed from the service under Section 213 of the economy act may be made.

New Agriculture Unit.

Federal organization for screwworm control in the Southeast is complete, it was announced at Agriculture yesterday afternoon. Headed by Dr. F. C. Bishopp, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, the control work personnel will include:

Dr. W. E. Dove, regional supervisor in charge of field work, and the following State supervisors—T. F. McGehee, Montgomery, Ala.; W. G. Bruce, Gainesville, Fla.; R. A. Roberts, Tifton, Ga.; D. C. Parman, Baton Rouge, La., and Jackson, Miss.; W. H. Clarke, Walterboro, S. C., and H. M. Brundrett, Beaumont, Tex. A research laboratory under direction of Dr. E. W. Laake, has been set up at Valdosta, Ga.

Labor and I. C. C. Cool Again.

Relief for the sweltering Labor Department and Interstate Commerce Commission is promised for today when the air-conditioning system is expected to be functioning again after a three-day break-down, according to Charles A. Peters (F), chief engineer, Buildings Branch, National Park Service.

The trouble has been in the pipe lines from the Potomac and Tidal Basin, which feeds circulating water into the cooling machinery proper. Mr. Peters pointed out that the strainers and pipes have been clogged with sand and debris. Divers from the Navy Yard and a crew averaging eight men have been at work on the system day and night since it got out of order. The limited space (manholes and other small openings) has prevented a larger force from getting at the repairs. Additional strainers will be installed and further studies made to prevent recurrence of the collapse, Mr. Peters said.

On the Air Today

Two advance notices of unusual interest: First Amos and Andy will move from the Blue network of N. B. C. to the Red, beginning next Monday. That means this popular team will be heard in Washington, after this week, through WRC instead of WMAL as in the past. The time remains 6 p. m.

Second: Fred Allen, who left the Town Hall show for a vacation on the West Coast, will appear as Jack Benny's guest Sunday night. Inasmuch as Allen or Benny would be named by nine of ten listeners as the outstanding air comic, it looks as though something ought to happen when these two meet on one program.

* * * *

A few days ago we reported that Frank Parker had quit the Benny show to return to New York. For the Allen-Benny merger Sunday night, Mary Livingstone will double for Parker. Which proves anything can happen before that half hour is over.

* * * *

Columbia's hot-weather menu dishes up "Keep the Change" tonight at 8:30, WJSV. All the musical numbers will be about money—"Love and a Dime," "Serenade to a Wealthy Widow," "Are You Making Any Money," and so on. Talent includes the Eaton Boys, Loretta Lee, Connie Gates, Harry Simone's Orchestra and the Do Re Mi Girls . . . Phil Cook and Mrs. Cook are guesting with the Show Boat, WRC, at 8 o'clock . . . WOL highlight: Representative Caroline O'Day speaking on "American Cooperation in Foreign Affairs," 8 p. m.

* * * *

Four young radio Thespians will present a playlet, "It Happens in Every Home," in the interests of the Better Housing Guild, WRC, at 4 p. m. Allen Brown, Peggy Pritchett and Jim Lanaghan come from Western High School and Jeane Gaines represents Roosevelt . . . Clive Brook and Anna May Wong will be Rudy Vallee's guests, WRC, at 7 o'clock . . . An all-Brahms program has been arranged by Frank Black for the N. B. C. Symphonic Hour, WMAL, at 9 o'clock.

One gentleman who heard Harris Hull's question yesterday on traffic conditions in Washington, in the noon hour sidewalk interviews from in front of The Post Building, begged an opportunity to make some notes before answering the question. Later he signaled he was ready and was interviewed. A taxi driver, who had pulled up to the curb at The Post Building, also gave his slant on Washington traffic. Another "Curbstone Queries" program will be aired today, WMAL, at 12 noon.

* * * *

The Post and WMAL will welcome suggestions on topics for "Curbstone Queries." Send them to "Curbstone Queries," care The Washington Post.

* * * *

Radio debut: The Odeon Players of the National Civic Theater Society present "The Bride the Sun Shines On," WOL, this afternoon at 4:30. It's a farce comedy of life among the Westchesterites. The cast includes Robert Pitkin, Margaret Hatfield, John Sikken, Catherine McCord, Richard Midgley and Ann Garrett. Direction of Forney Reese.

* * * *

Before the end of the week WJSV will inauspiciously toss a new voice into the announcers' ring. He is Hugh Conover, coming directly to WJSV from WIS, down Carolina way. He is reported to be tall, gangly, blond and of the Bob Trout type. He is 24 years old or thereabouts and his New Jersey residence for the last few years has taken the South out of his speech. Anyway, no one could compete with Lee Everett in that department.

* * * *

May we be the first to congratulate Art Godfrey on his "Tommy Boy" number Tuesday night.

WHY SHOP ENDLESSLY for a used upright or grand piano when right under one roof you may see, test and compare prices of good used pianos in great variety? You'll see, too, the wisdom of buying instruments thoroughly regulated or rebuilt by Kimball factory experts, including guaranteed service without additional cost following purchase. These Kimball advantages are seldom realized in dealing elsewhere, while the additional expense, contingent in purchasing pianos at auction or private sales reacts severely upon the price of so-called bargains. Visit Kimball's before you buy, not afterwards. 721 11th st. nw., 3 doors north of Palais Royal.

WONDERFUL BARGAIN in high-grade grand piano. Used scarcely 7 months and just returned from one of Washington's finest homes. Credit is allowed for fine upright and cash paid to date leave this instrument now reduced $210.00. Inspect tomorrow if you expect to secure this real bargain. W. W. Kimball Co., 721 11th st. nw.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

Back to the Horse!

Congressman Gassaway wants to bring back the horse, and this department is with him to the last buggy whip. Write your Senator and Representative today to bring back the old gray mare!

• • • •

America has never been the same since they took her away. By the way, who took her away?

• • • •

How about a congressional investigation? The country was happy and tranquil when there was a one-horse barn in nearly every yard and a hitchin' post in front of every home.

• • • •

Restore the hitching post industry! Bring back the currycomb and harness oil trades!

• • • •

Back to the days when the hay and feed merchant was the town's most prosperous figure, when there was a watering trough at Five Corners and when there was plenty of parking space in front of Mix's drug store in Chapel street, even on Saturday mornings!

• • • •

What's really responsible for America's present state of goodness? The parking space problem! Trying to find a place to leave the car has broken down this country mentally and physically.

• • • •

Ten days of driving down to the center of the town in a horse and buggy and just leaving the darned thing right out in front of the store would restore normalcy.

• • • •

When a man got unhappy or uneasy around the house in the old days he could always go out in the barn and forget his troubles by greasing an axle, shining the harness or mending the horsefly net. There was something about currycombing a horse that took his mind off the broader life.

• • • •

Because Joe Hubinger, out Whalley avenue, had eight horses and a half dozen coaches the neighbors didn't feel the world was upset and there ought to be a redistribution of wealth.

• • • •

Bring back the horse! And don't forget to bring back the address of a good blacksmith!

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Versus Relatives By Harry J. Tuthill

What a relief a little quiet is. Ever since we got back from that island to find my sister renting out our rooms, there's been more people trudging in and out of here than at a railroad station.
We must have a lot of rubber in our nervous systems. The average couple with our relatives would have so many nervous blowouts that they could tell time by them.
Well of course there's two kinds of relatives.
Most of them have an axe to grind. When they get it sharpened they use both hands in letting you have it right in the whiskers, too.
Meek ones are all right.
It's the others who make all the trouble. The ones who don't know their place.
The only person I ever heard of who could put a tough relative in his right place is a judge who gets a whack at his family tree while court is in session.

Johnson Urges Central Power To Rule Trade

Calls It Incredible That Government Is Without Authority.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 10.—In a postscript to his recent book, "The Blue Eagle From Egg to Earth," Gen. Hugh S. Johnson declares "the time has come when some central power must regulate manufacture, commerce, mining and agriculture in the United States."

The Supreme Court in the poultry case decision invalidating NIRA, Johnson declares, raises the question whether the Federal Government has the power to regulate these industries.

"If it has no such power," the first NRA chieftain says, "then it is the only civilized government that exists on this earth which has it not. Now that is incredible and impossible."

Robbed of Its Powers.

If the Federal Government has no power, the general adds, "then there is no power."

The postscript, entitled "How NRA and Blue Eagle Were Killed," will be published July 17. Excerpts from it were authorized by the publishers, Doubleday-Doran.

"The Blue Eagle," Johnson writes, "is not as dead as a dodo bird (a statement once attributed to him) * * * but he has no powers."

Delving into the history of NRA after his resignation last fall, Johnson says:

Successors Did Nothing.

"NRA was not reformed by my successors. It was just paralyzed. They sat there from October, 1934, to March, 1935, saying they were prescribing a cure for its ills. The fact is now revealed that they did nothing. * * *

"Nothing worthy of the name was done to defend NRA before Congress. * * * Nobody from NRA itself appeared with a complete reasoned, documented defense. * * * When one reviews that history, it is hard to repress a retching nausea."

As for the case in the Supreme Court, Johnson says, "the handling of the litigation is almost without precedent for ineptitude."

Three Arrested in Piracy Investigation

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

These men were held in Los Angeles yesterday by authorities probing the pirate robbery of the gambling ship Monte Carlo 8 miles off the Pacific shore. Left to right—Henry Underwood, cafe owner; Fred Anderson, sailor, and Walter Miller, cafe owner. The pirates' haul was reported at $50,000. The Government seeks an indictment against Miller but doubtful registry of the gambling ship has complicated its efforts. The other two, it is understood, will be released.

Mr. Knight had been in ill-health for several months. A member of the family found him on the kitchen floor early today. All the gas jets had been turned on, police said.

Fredericksburg Plans Erection of School

Fredericksburg, Va., July 10.—The city council in session last night appointed President William S. Chesley and City Manager L. J. Houston, jr., to devise means of complying with a request from the city school board to erect a 16-room junior high school.

Joseph E. McCalley, school board president, in a communication to Claude Parcell, chairman of the council school committee, said local schools were overcrowded, and that the situation was "detrimental to health." The communication also revealed that 175 children are forced to attend school on a half-time basis because classrooms are not available.

Inland Waterway Bill Introduced in House

By the Associated Press.

Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, introduced a revised bill yesterday to authorize construction of an inland waterway from the Tennessee Valley to Mobile Bay.

The new measure stipulated the waterway should have a navigable channel not less than 9 feet deep and that the project include a canal connecting Bear Creek and the Tombigbee River.

Appropriation of funds for the work would be authorized by the bill, but no limits were fixed.

Wolf Receives A Full Pardon From Gov. Nice

Baltimore Attorney Jubilant as Record Is Cleared of Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 10.—Harry B. Wolf, a leading lawyer in Maryland until his disbarment in 1922, today declared himself "grateful to the Governor and the many good people who interceded in my behalf."

Wolf was given a full and unconditional pardon by executive order today. He was convicted of a misdemeanor prior to his disbarment and fined $100. The pardon will have the effect of restoring the fine and removing the conviction from his record.

Calls Are Congratulatory.

Gov. Nice said he received a great many telephone calls and telegrams after the pardon was issued, "all of them congratulatory."

"I have received no messages expressing regret over the action," the executive stated. "After all it was simply writing a message of clemency across the face of the record. Wolf and his family have suffered enough for the deed for which he was convicted."

In a statement announcing the pardon, the Governor went to considerable length in discussing the protest previously given by the Baltimore criminal justice commission. That group had said the pardon would simply be the initial step toward the former lawyer's reinstatement to the bar.

"I feel this protest is based on a mistaken premise," Gov. Nice said. "It presupposes that any action by me would have an influence on the supreme bench for or against Mr. Wolf's reinstatement. This is so definitely impossible as to eliminate debate.

Thousands Urge Pardon.

"With Mr. Wolf's application for reinstatement, should he ever make one, I have nothing whatever to do, and upon that point I should like the public to be thoroughly so informed."

The statement recited the fact that several thousand persons had urged the pardon, among them many important persons, while only a few had opposed the move. The most important protest, it was said, was that of the criminal justice commission.

Charges against Wolf grew out of a visit to his home by Walter Socolow, later convicted of participating in the holdup and murder of William B. Nirris in Baltimore. Charges of conspiracy to defeat justice were brought against the lawyer.

'Numbers' Man Gets $500 Fine and Day

Danville, Va., July 10 (AP).—A jury in corporation court today found Charles Fox guilty of operating a lottery in connection with alleged "numbers" writing and fined him $500 and sentenced him to serve one day in jail. Raymond Fox, 18, his son, and Vance A. Bassinger, indicted with the elder Fox, were acquitted.

The three were arrested two months ago in a raid on a basement office at the home of Fox. Chief of Police J. H. Martin led the raid. Several adding machines, desks, typewriters and "numbers" tickets were found as well as more than $6,000 in cash which is being held in a bank pending settlement of the case.

Building Brings Job Increase In Winchester

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., July 10.—Employment in Winchester and Frederick County is at the highest level during the last year and a half, according to information obtained from officials today.

Some of the work available is attributed to seasonal farm activity, but the majority of jobs, particularly in the city, resulted from an impetus to the building industry.

During the last six months permits for new construction have increased more than four and a half times over that for the same period last year, according to City Manager Arthur M. Field. General improvements to the homes and business houses have increased from 25 to 40 per cent over last year, it is estimated, and improvements which utilize building materials have increased 25 per cent, he said.

Although many of those making improvements have borrowed the funds, no loans have been issued under the Federal housing act, although a campaign conducted last fall, during which $158,000 in improvements was pledged, is believed responsible for the increase in building.

Permits issued during June amounted to $123,000 and for the first week of July to $12,000 additional. The largest single job under construction is an addition to the postoffice, which involves an expenditure of $40,500.

Frostburg Bank Plans To Ask U. S. for Help

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., July 10.—A committee appointed at a meeting of depositors of the old First National Bank met tonight to formulate plans looking to placing responsibility on the Government for certain losses.

The committee, consisting of Jonathan Sleeman, former member of the Maryland House of Delegates, chairman; Charles M. Sloan, secretary; Miss Margaret Jones, Thomas Elias and Herbert Griffith will communicate with Representative David J. Lewis and Government agencies with a view toward having the depositors reimbursed for losses, if any, sustained while the bank was under the conservatorship, and also any losses previously suffered by depositors through loans allegedly made in violation of the Federal banking laws. The affairs of the bank are gradually assuming such shape that a dividend may be possible in the near future, Thomas B. Finan, receiver, told depositors.

Maxie Hurries Home, Denying Marital Woes

Signing the admittance slip, he requested Dr. William F. Rienhoff, jr., to proceed as speedily as possible because "I'm in a hurry to get back home to the little woman."

"We have not even had an argument yet," he said, while arrangements were being made for the examination, "and there won't be any, either."

He declared apologetically that he did not have time to telephone Mrs. Baer at Long Branch, N. J., yesterday morning before leaving New York.

Asked if there was any truth in the report that differences of faith had caused any trouble between them, the patient replied:

"We have no differences, and let's not talk about religion."

Hoffman, standing by nervously, gave his confirmation and added:

"I talked with Mrs. Baer over the telephone before we left New York and she asked me to wish Max a pleasant trip for her. She seemed to be in a good humor and did not even intimate that there was any trouble between them. She said, 'Tell Max to have a good trip and to hurry up and come home.'"

X-ray pictures made by Dr. Rienhoff showed no broken bones or torn ligaments but only a strained finger tendon. The swelling in his left hand was ascribed to inflammation. With his hands in such condition, Baer should never have met James J. Braddock in the fight which cost the former his championship, the surgeon stated.

A veritable fashion plate in his green gabardine suit, with shirt and tie to match, and brown suede shoes, Baer patiently answered the crowd of inquisitors besieging him as he stepped out of the transport plane here. Less than a fortnight earlier he had stepped into a plane at the same field, accompanied by his bride.

The couple were married here June 29 at the home of Judge F. Dickinson Letts, who performed the ceremony.
